KATONAH, N. Y., June 26, 1889.

My Dear Classmates : A second edition of the History of the Class of 1869 of Amherst College, covering the entire period of twenty years since our graduation, is now offered to your kind consideration. It was planned to have it ready for distribution at our reunion at Amherst, July 3d, but a delay of a few days has become necessary. The great majority of the class have responded to the appeal for information with a promptness most delightful, but a few have waited for a second or third prodding, and they must bear a large measure of responsibility for the delay. Our most efficient Secretary, W. Reynolds Brown, gave the undertaking a vigorous start in the circular letter sent out last March. Since then the pressure of his business cares has been such that the task of editing the material gathered has devolved upon the undersigned. There have been many pleasant features of this work, and if the result prove of any interest and value to you, and serve to strengthen the bond of class fellowship, I shall feel amply repaid for the time and trouble it has cost me. The important matter of publishing the history has been under the supervision of Donald, who very kindly assumed that care.

Errors and omissions cannot of course be avoided with the utmost precaution against them. Your indulgence in this matter is confidently asked, and an early correction will make future work of this kind easier and more complete.

Five more of our number have won stars in our record since 1879—E. A. Adams, Emmons, Fuller, Warn, and Chittenden. Adams and Warn died on the same day, January 7, 1882.

With the exception of L. E. Wells, M.D., everyone, both of the graduate and non-graduate members, has been heard from.

The pages devoted to statistics with their totals of eighty-seven boys and seventy-four girls are pleasant reading, but the frequent stars upon these pages witness that some of our number have passed through deep waters, and call forth our loving sympathy.

Only five of our graduate members and two of the non-graduates remain in a fractional condition and refuse to be reduced to unity. Not all of these cases are hopeless, but some we fear are.

Let all have photographs taken during January, 1894, and then expect a third, illustrated edition of our history for our quarter centennial.

Very truly yours,

JOHN H. EASTMAN.

BIOGRAPHICAL RECORD OF GRADUATE MEMBERS OF THE CLASS.

* EDWARD AUSTIN ADAMS, son of Austin and Almira (Stearns) Adams, was born May 5, 1848, at Lawrence, Mass. He prepared for college at Oakham, Mass., where his parents resided at the time he entered college. During the first three years after graduation he was engaged in teaching at Cummington, Mass., Spring Run, Penn., and Cornwall, N. Y. In October, 1872, he commenced the study of medicine with D. W. Miner, M.D., of Ware, Mass. His medical studies were subsequently pursued at the Medical Department of the New York University, and at the Buffalo Medical College. From the latter institution he received the degree of M. D. in February, 1876, and soon after became Assistant Physician at the State Asylum for the Insane, Kalamazoo, Mich., where he still remains. The institution at present contains 560 patients, of whom Adams has immediate charge of about 120, visiting them twice daily. The nature of his professional work is leading him in his studies to give especial attention to biological science.

This report of our classmate appeared in our Decennial Record, and we were permitted to greet him at our Reunion in 1879. But when we came together again in 1884, a tender and impressive feature of our meeting was the recital of his sad death, given us by his chum, R. M. Woods. The latter has kindly furnished the following sketch in memory of one beloved by us all :—

At the time of his death, Dr. Adams was Assistant Medical Superintendent of the Michigan Asylum for the Insane in Kalamazoo. While on his daily round of inspection he was assaulted and stabbed by one of the patients. This assault took place Friday morning, Jan. 6, 1882. Death followed at six o'clock the following morning. This patient had previously threatened Adams' life, and on this account had been carefully searched, but nothing was found in his possession of a dangerous character. His enmity was due to a suspicion that the Doctor failed to forward letters he had written. The wound seems at no time to have given much pain. Adams only became aware of it by the appearance of blood, and was slow to believe himself seriously hurt. But when examination made evident the nature of the injury, he recognized at once what the end would be. Manifesting no agitation, his feeling found expression only in a few words of sympathy for his friends at home.

Since graduation Dr. Adams had changed as little as any member of '69. He was "the Doctor" still. In figure, he remained slender. In his movements, he was quick and nervous. There were still frequent indications of that shyness and reserve which characterized him in College. He was as honest and guileless the last day of his life, as he was in boyhood.

It was predicted when Adams was at Amherst that his shyness and what some call "ignorance of the world" would prove grave, if not insurmountable, obstacles in the way of his success in life. But, if they were obstacles, they were nobly mastered. At his death Adams had gained the position and reputation of a rising man in his profession. Always in connection with his regular work, he pursued some independent line of investigation. The position which he held, he had gained by repeated promotions in the service of the State. His skill and usefulness as a physician received many marked recognitions.

The doctor won friends wherever he was known. He was a favorite with the officers and attendants at the institution, and the patients generally were fond of him. Those who remember his aversion to composition will be interested to learn that Adams' letters to the friends of patients in the asylum were particularly admired. They were always so honest and clear in the information they gave, always so kind in spirit.

It is hardly necessary to dwell at length on Adams' success in college, nor on the affection in which he was held by his classmates. Quick to appreciate fun, even at his own expense, frank and decided in the expression of his opinion, eager and enthusiastic as a student, he entered heartily into every phase of college life. Some who came to him ten minutes before the recitation, and asked him to translate the Greek for the day, can testify to his unselfishness. Those who argued with him, competed with him for honors, or played with him at practical jokes, all knew how free he was from anything that savored of envy, or anger, or malice.

He left, at his death, a father and mother, two sisters, and a brother, all living in Oakham. He was the oldest of the children—the common object of affection and admiration. His annual visit was the event of the year. His invalid brother lived in anticipation of the doctor's return. His funeral was attended at Oakham, where the services were conducted by his college chum.

Singularly guileless in spirit, pure in life, chaste in word, to the end he kept himself "unspotted from the world." One of the youngest of the class, his sad end seemed not like the fall of a man, but the striking down of a noble boy.

Our cause of sorrow must not be measured by his worth, for then "it had no end."

The following resolutions will be of interest, as showing the high esteem in which he was held by his professional associates.

At a meeting of the Trustees of the Michigan Asylum for the Insane, Kalamazoo, held Jan. 26, 1882, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Our late friend, Dr. Edward A. Adams, the Assistant Medical Superintendent of this Institution, has been suddenly stricken down, while at his post of duty, in the prime of manhood, and in the midst of his usefulness, and,

Whereas, The purity of his private life, his unfailing gentleness and sincerity, his refinement and courtesy, as well as the zeal, fidelity and intelligence with which he discharged his official duties, render it fitting that we place upon record our high appreciation of his personal character, and his services to suffering humanity ; therefore

Resolved, That the untimely death of Dr. Adams is a calamity to the Institution, and an irreparable personal loss to all who knew him.

Resolved, That we desire to express to his afflicted friends our sense of their loss and our profound sympathy in their bereavement.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the meeting and a copy of the same be forwarded to the parents of the deceased.

CHARLES HERBERT ALLEN was born in Lowell, Mass., April 15, 1848, and prepared for college in the High School of his native city. After graduation he engaged in business, and since January 1, 1875, has been a member of the firm of Otis Allen & Son, extensive manufacturers of lumber at Lowell. Taking an active part in public affairs, identified with the interests of his city and eminently successful in business, he has from time to time been called to a prominent share in the direction of the educational and other public institutions of Lowell. But a wider sphere of public service soon summoned him, and at our class reunion in 1884 we were happy to welcome the Hon. C. H. Allen, who, after two terms (1880-82) in the Massachusetts House of Representatives, had just completed a term in the State Senate. He was also Col. Allen, and we felt proud of our representative upon Gov. Robinson's Staff at that Commencement. We felt that these were but the first upward steps of a rising man, and were not surprised to learn a few months later that our classmate had been chosen to represent the Eighth District of Massachusetts in the Forty-ninth Congress. Two years later he was re-elected and served with distinction in the Fiftieth Congress, his second term ending March 4, 1889. Last autumn, but for his peremptorily declining the honor, he would have received a unanimous renomination for a third term.

Allen's career in the service of his State and of the Nation has been a most honorable one, and the Class of '69 heartily joins in the abundant commendation it has received. He was recognized as one of the working members of Congress, faithful to the interests of his constituents, and taking an intelligent and eloquent part in the discussion of the important questions affecting the welfare of the whole country. It is emphatic but well-merited praise to say that he achieved distinction among the Congressmen of a State whose Representatives have always stood in the first rank of our National Legislators. A member of our class, meeting not long ago a representative of one of Lowell's greatest industries, asked him if he knew Congressman Allen of his district. "Know him," he replied, "everybody knows him. He stepped into the shoes of one of the ablest men we have had for years, and while people were wondering how he would manage to get along, he stepped out in advance of his predecessor and has continuously acquitted himself with distinction and honor. Know Charlie Allen ! I rather think I do."

In the Forty-ninth Congress Allen was a member of the Committee on Indian Affairs, and his maiden speech was delivered March 11, 1886, upon a bill affecting some of the Indian tribes. Another noteworthy speech was made January 20, 1887, upon the Inter-State Commerce Bill, and during the same session he was one of the speakers at the service in memory of the Hon. Austin F. Pike, Senator from New Hampshire, who had been an old friend of his father. We find him taking an active part in the great

Tariff discussion of 1888, making several speeches, which evince a thorough study of the questions involved, and present them with a wealth of pointed illustration, and frequent play of humor and sarcasm which have given them a charm for your historian not possessed by the ordinary treatise on Political Economy. January 19, 1888, a special service was held in connection with the presentation to the House of portraits of former Speakers, who had been Representatives from Massachusetts. Our classmate was the orator chosen to present the portrait of the Hon. Joseph Bradley Varnum, and his speech on that occasion richly merited the praise given it by the leading papers of the country.

It may be well to state that these facts have been obtained from a careful observation of Allen's Congressional career, the gentleman himself in his report for the class history disposing of these four years in as many lines. Though retiring for the present to private life, we confidently expect letters from our sons in the not distant future describing Commencement at old Amherst honored by the presence of Gov. Allen and Staff.

Allen was married November 10, 1870, at Manchester, N. H., to Miss Harriet Coleman Dean. They have two children, Bertha, born April 2, 1872, and Louise, born February 25, 1875. His residence is 411 Middlesex Street, Lowell, Mass.

WILLIAM OSBORN BALLANTINE was born at Ahmednagar, India, February 9, 1849. His preparation for college was made at home under the instruction of his father, the Rev. Henry Ballantine, for many years an honored missionary of the A. B. C. F. M. in India. The three years following graduation were spent in New York City, studying medicine, and he received the degree of M. D. February 21, 1872, from the New York University. During the year 1872 he filled the position of house surgeon in the Colored Home in New York City. In 1873 he removed to Columbus, Ohio, where he practiced his profession for about a year. Called home to Amherst by his mother's death, he soon after received an appointment from the American Board to engage in missionary work in India. January 6, 1875, he was married to Miss Alice Cary Parsons, at Easthampton, Mass., and they embarked for India January 23, 1875. About a month was spent in England and on the Continent, while on their way to India, where they arrived April 18. During his residence in India he has combined the work of a physician and a missionary, dividing his time between Ahmednagar, a city of 36,000 inhabitants, and Rahuri, twenty-two miles distant. In his latter capacity he has had the superintendency of a station and several out-stations, with a number of native preachers and teachers under his charge. In connection with his medical work he had charge of a dispensary at Ahmednagar, and has met with gratifying success. In 1879 he was employed by the British Government on special duty to report concerning the famine. Mrs. Ballantine died September 9, 1878. In June, 1883, he returned to America for a vacation, and remained until October, 1885. He was thus able to be present at the reunion of the class at Amherst in 1884. During his stay in America he took a partial course in theology at Andover Seminary, and was ordained to the work of the ministry, July 8, 1885, by a council held in Pilgrim Church, Dorchester, Mass.

He was married August 20, 1885, at Fitchburg, Mass., to Miss Josephine Louise Perkins, and returned to India with his wife soon after their marriage. Since his return he has been stationed chiefly at Rahuri, where he has carried on dispensary and educational work, and has had charge of nearly the same out-stations as formerly.

A young missionary is in training now in their home, Joseph William Ballantine, born July 30, 1888. A letter has recently been received bearing date, Rahuri, Western India, April 3, 1889, in which Ballantine writes :

“I wish very much I could be present at the next class reunion. I am hoping to send my wife and child for a six-months’ vacation to America, but I must stay by the work here for the present, especially as I feel so well and hearty as I do. You must tell the boys that I will remember them when they meet together again, and shall try to picture to myself much of what will be said and done on that occasion. If all or any one in the class feel disposed to make a donation toward my dispensary work, or toward the building of some new school house in the district, I certainly shall be glad to give them the privilege of doing so. The people are beginning more and more to appreciate our work and to clamor for schools and education.

“The same is the case with regard to the practice of medicine. Each year sees the people appreciate medical work done for them, and large numbers flock to us for treatment."

WILLIAM MARSH BENEDICT was born in the city of Brooklyn, N. Y., November 17, 1847. His preparation for college was made at the Polytechnic Institute of that city. After graduation he began the study of law in the office of S. T. Freeman, New York City, where he remained until the following spring. He then entered the office of William L. Gill, of Brooklyn, but after a few months was obliged to discontinue study on account of ill health.

In September, 1870, he was able to resume his law studies with the firm of Lewis & MacKay, Brooklyn, where he remained until admitted to the bar September 15, 1871. He began the practice of law in Brooklyn, but in February, 1873, was prostrated with a severe nervous illness, confining him to his room until the following May, when he took a trip to Europe, remaining abroad until the September following. On his return he resumed his law practice in Brooklyn. In May, 1875, he went abroad again, with an invalid sister. Returning in September he resumed his practice at 367 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, and in New York City. His present office is at 219 Montague Street, Brooklyn.

He was married October 10, 1878, to Miss Grace Dillingham, of Brooklyn, and a graduate of Vassar College, Class of '74. They reside at 225 Cumberland Street, Brooklyn, and have two children, Melissa M., born August 17, 1879; and Susan D., born May 5, 1881.

EDWARD AUGUSTINE BENNER was born at East Pittston, Me., March 31, 1848, and fitted for college at the High School, Lowell, Mass. After graduation he devoted two years to teaching in a preparatory school for boys, at Cornwall, N. Y. In the autumn of 1871 he began his studies at Andover Theological Seminary, graduating in 1874. The following September he accepted the professorship of Mathematics in Drury College, Springfield, Mo. Here he remained for three years until 1877, when ill-health from chronic bronchitis obliged him to resign his professorship, and to spend a year in rest at his old home in Lowell, Mass. In 1878 he accepted a professorship in Colorado College, and was detailed to have charge of an academy at Salt Lake City. This position he still occupies, having the supervision of the New West Education Commissions' work in Utah. Benner simply writes: "I am still pushing Salt Lake Academy, which has obtained some credit in this region." The fact is, that it is impossible to exaggerate the importance of the work he has been doing in its bearing upon a satisfactory solution of the perplexing Mormon problem. The institution over which he presides has made most encouraging progress under his energetic and wise administration, and occupies a leading position in the educational work which is doing so much to undermine Mormonism. We are glad to know that his health was restored ten years ago when he first came to Zion.

Benner was married August 31, 1874, at Lowell, Mass., to Miss Mary S. Carter. They have five children, Caroline Frances, born May 26, 1875; Burnham Carter, born May 6, 1877; Edward Hopkins, born July 12, 1878; Mary Katharine, born February 20, 1884, and Allen, born March 17, 1885.

JOSEPH HEGEMAN BOGART was born at Roslyn, L. I., November 11, 1846, and prepared for college at Flushing Institute, Flushing, L. I.

The autumn of 1869 found him beginning his medical studies at the Dartmouth College Medical School. His second and third courses of lectures were taken at Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York City, where he received the degree of M.D., March 1, 1872. He began practice at once in Roslyn, L. I., his native place, where he still resides, attending so closely to his profession that he has taken a vacation only once in the last ten years. In 1882 he was appointed Visiting Physician to the Queens County Lunatic Asylum, a position which he still holds. His standing among his professional brethren is seen in their making him the President of the Queens County Medical Society. In 1887 he was elected a member of the Holland Society of New York City.

For fourteen years he has been a member of the Board of Education of Roslyn, and his interest in the welfare of the rising generation is now greatly increased by having two prospective pupils in his own home. He was married February 21, 1884, to Miss Ethelena T. Albertson, of Mineola, L. I. Their two children are Jennie, born January 23, 1885, and Ethelena, born June 8, 1888. For the information of classmates who have not seen DR. Bogart, it may be mentioned that he is much more of a man than in 1869, the perpendicular measurement the same, but in breadth much increased.

CLARENCE FULLER BOYDEN was born at Attleboro, Mass., March 5, 1846, and prepared for College at the Stoughtonham Institute, Sharon, Mass., his home at the time of entering Amherst.

A professorship in mathematics at the West was offered him after graduation, but circumstances requiring his presence near home, he accepted the position of master of the North Providence Grammar School, R. I. Here he remained during the school year of '69 and '70. During the following autumn and winter he was engaged in book-canvassing; and, while thus employed, began the study of law in the office of Judge Allen, of Salem, N. Y., continuing his studies there until the spring of 1872. Called home by the death of his father, he soon after became sub-master in the high school in Taunton, Mass., a position previously filled by Seabury and also by Chickering. Since that time he has been connected with the public schools of Taunton as master of the Weir Grammar School, assistant principal of the High School, and now as master of the Cohannet Street Grammar School.

He was married July 4, 1876, to Isabelle H., daughter of James H. Anthony, of Taunton. His present address is 27 Summer St., Taunton, Mass.

WILLIAM REYNOLDS BROWN was born in New York February 15, 1846, and prepared for college in his native city. After graduation two years were spent at Cambridge, Mass., in the study of law. After receiving the degree of LL.B. from Harvard University in 1871, he began at once the practice of his profession in Morrisania, N. Y., in association with Judge S. D. Gifford. Two years later he removed his law office to White Plains, the county seat of Westchester Co. In 1874 the law firm became Brown & Westcott, and in 1877 Hall, Brown & Westcott, with offices both in White Plains and New York City.

This was his status ten years ago. His residence continues in White Plains, but for several years his business has been wholly in New York. In 1882 his partner, Mr. Hall, left the firm to go on the bench of the City Court of New York. He continued the practice of law under the firm name of Brown & Westcott until 1884, and then for one year alone. But in 1885 sedentary office life not agreeing with his health, he decided to give up the practice of law and devote himself to a more active out-of-door life in developing the business of a real estate corporation, at the head of which he had been for several years. As President of the Port Morris Land and Improvement Company and in a general real estate business he still finds congenial and wholesome employment. He has spent numerous vacations in pleasure and recruiting health in Europe, and during the past year has divided his time almost equally between home and abroad, owing to the temporary residence of his family in Switzerland for educational purposes. He expects to go abroad again June 29, and the coming autumn to bring his family home, and again settle down with White Plains for a summer home at least.

Aside from holding the position of President of the Village of White Plains, from which he resigned after a year's service to go abroad, he has kept out of politics in past years. For nine years he served in the Board of Education of the town. He was married May 7, 1872, to Miss Nellie W. Babcock, of Brooklyn, N.Y. Of their children, the "class cup" boy, Warren Day, born February 5, 1873, will be ready to enter Amherst in 1890. Cleveland Hall, born June 11, 1874, died December 8, 1886. Those of us who were permitted to know this dear boy in his own home will not soon forget him. Their youngest son is Donald Winchester, born September 9, 1877, a namesake of our classmate, Dr. Donald. Office address, 146 Broadway, N. Y. City.

JOSEPH KNOWLTON CHICKERING was born in Portland, Maine, July 20, 1846, and prepared for college in the High School of his native city. The first year after graduation was spent at his home in Wakefield, Mass., in private study. In September, 1870, he became Principal of the Whittenton Grammar School, Taunton, Mass. The next year he was promoted to be Sub-Master of the High School, but in 1872 resigned this position to become Assistant Classical Instructor in the Springfield (Mass.) High School. In 1873 he was called to Amherst College as Instructor in English. On September 9 of that year he was married to Miss Mary E. Conner, at Exeter, N. H. On the 19th of February, 1875, a son, Edward Conner, was born, but the happy event was followed by the sad death of Mrs. Chickering, March 12, 1875.

After four years of successful work in his instructorship, he was made Associate Professor of English. While occupying this position he edited the Triennial Catalogue of the college in 1878, and for several years prepared the Obituary Record. Resigning his professorship in 1885, after a few months of rest at his father's home in Wakefield, Mass., he accepted a position upon the Editorial Staff of the new Century Dictionary, the first numbers of which have just come from the press of the Century Company, New York City. This remarkable work will have added value for us, because of Chickering's labors upon it, which continued from November, 1885, to December, 1886.

The first four months of 1887 were spent in English studies at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md., and the following year was spent largely with his father, the Rev. Dr. J. W. Chickering, in the neighborhood of Boston, Mass., and in the city of Washington, D. C.

October 10, 1888, he entered upon his duties as Professor (pro tempore) of Rhetoric and English Literature in the University of Vermont, Burlington, Vt., where he writes that he is at present "happily and busily employed."

JAMES HOBART CHILDS was born at Gilman town, N. H., May 25, 1847, and fitted for college at the High School, Amherst, Mass., where he resided prior to and during his college course.

The first three years after graduation he was engaged in teaching at Necedah, Wis. During the second year of his residence there he married "one of his best scholars," Miss M. Jennie Bailey, on the 5th of January, 1871. Here also his first child was born, a son, Rufus, September 19, 1871, but dying in infancy.

In August, 1872, he entered Andover Theological Seminary, and prosecuted his theological studies there during the regular course of three years. The first Sabbath after graduation he took charge of the Congregational Church of South Byfield, Mass., and was ordained and installed pastor of that church October 7, 1875. While here two sons were born, Irving Hobart, born April 21, 1876, and J. Richmond, born July 5, 1880.

After a pastorate there of over five years, he removed to Wenham, Mass., on the Eastern Railroad, near one of the finest beaches on the coast, where he began his labors, January 1, 1881. While residing here, Mrs. Childs died, June 27, 1882, of gastric fever.

His pastorate at Wenham terminated May, 1884, and he accepted a call to Northbridge, on the Providence & Worcester Railroad, twelve miles from Worcester. Here he still resides, ministering to two churches, the original church of the town, and a younger organization, an offshoot from the former. The morning service is held at one church and the evening at the other. Northbridge is a manufacturing town, with large French and Irish elements in the population. Childs writes: "My work here has been much more interesting and encouraging than in either of the earlier pastorates, and we are very greatly attached to our people."

The "we" includes Mrs. Childs, for he was married at Newburyport, Mass., July 2, 1885, to Miss Susie P. Blake, who spent four years as a missionary of the American Board among the Armenians in Asia Minor. There are several hundred Armenians in the vicinity of their home, and Mrs. Childs is often called upon to act as an interpreter, and last winter conducted an evening school with her husband's assistance for the benefit of Armenians in a neighboring place who wished to learn the English language.

A daughter, Alice, was born May 20, 1888. As a member of the School Board of Northbridge, and as Scribe of the Worcester South Association of Congregational Ministers, our classmate is serving his day and generation as well as in faithful discharge of the duties of his pastorate, happy in his work and in his home.

HERBERT J. COOK was born at Hadley, Mass., May 18, 1845. His preparatory studies were pursued at Hopkins Academy, at Hadley, and at Phillips Academy, Exeter, N. H.

During the first year after graduation he taught in Hopkins Academy, in his native place. In the fall of 1870 he removed to Oxford, Chenango County, N. Y., where he remained as principal of the Oxford Academy for two years. During this time he became a candidate for holy orders in the Protestant Episcopal Church, and began a course of study in divinity, under the direction of Bishop Huntington, of the Diocese of Central New York. In September, 1872, he went to College Hill, Ohio, a suburb of Cincinnati, as teacher of classics, etc., in the "Ohio Female College." Here he remained one year, and then removed to Pewee Valley, Ky. to fill a similar position in the "Kentucky College" for young ladies. This institution is located near Louisville, and is patronized largely by that city.

He was admitted to deacon's orders, June 27, 1873, by Bishop Huntington, at St. Luke's Church, Cayuga, N. Y., on the occasion of the consecration of that church. During the following year he served as deacon at St. James' Church, Pewee Valley, in connection with his school duties. He was admitted to priest's orders, June 18, 1874, by Bishop Huntington, at Calvary Church, Utica, N. Y. After two years more of combined college and church work, he accepted a call to the rectorship of St. Mark's Church, Coldwater, Mich., and entered upon his duties there, June 6, 1875. Here he remained for a little more than ten years. During his ministry the church prospered greatly. In 1876 a fine brick chapel was built. Six years later a handsome church of pressed brick and cut stone, adjoining the chapel on the principal street of the city, was occupied. He also had charge of a Mission at Quincy, six miles from Coldwater, where a beautiful and commodious church was built as the result of his labors. In the diocese of Western Michigan he stood in the front rank of the clergy, and was frequently honored with important trusts, representing the diocese as one of the clerical delegates at the General Convention, held at Philadelphia, October, 1883. In addition to his church work, he was identified with the educational interests of the city and county, serving as member and Secretary of the Board of School Examiners, and as member and President of the City Board of Education.

September 29, 1885, he removed to Chicago, and took charge of St. Bartholomew's Mission at Englewood. This work prospered and the Mission became a self-sustaining parish. May 1, 1887, a call from the large and important parish of Christ Church, Dayton, Ohio, having been accepted, he began work in that city, where he still resides. Here also his ministry has been crowned with encouraging success, to which a Parish Building just completed at a cost of $10,000 testifies, as well as many other tokens of material and spiritual advancement.

Cook was married August 23, 1870, at Geneva, N. Y., to Miss Matilda Chapelle Metcalfe. They have two children, both born at Coldwater, Mich.; Edith Matilda, November 27, 1876, and Theodora Lyon, July 27, 1879.

ELIJAH WINCHESTER DONALD was born in Andover, Mass., July 31, 1848, and fitted for college at the Punchard School of his native town.

For two years after graduation he engaged in teaching, the first year in charge of the High School at Belchertown, Mass., the following year at Newport, R. I. In October 1871 he entered the Divinity School of the Protestant Episcopal Church at Philadelphia, but after a few months continued his studies at the Union Theological Seminary, N. Y. City, when he graduated May, 1874. During his residence at the Seminary he assisted as lay reader in the Church of the Ascension, Dr. John Cotton Smith, Rector. He was ordained as deacon May 1, 1874, and became assistant minister in the same church. He retained this position until the summer of 1875, when he accepted a call to the Rectorship of the Church of the Intercession, Washington Heights, N. Y. City. He was ordained priest, October 7, 1875. After seven years of successful labor in that parish, he was called in April, 1882, to become Rector of the Church of the Ascension. This call he accepted, and now for seven years he has been meeting all the demands of a large city parish with a success which has placed him in the very front rank of the clergy of his diocese. The Church of the Ascension, located on Fifth Avenue, at the corner of Tenth Street, has been wonderfully developed under his ministry. Donald's voice has had no uncertain sound, whether in his regular ministrations to his own people, or in discussing matters of theology and ecclesiastical polity in the Church Congress, or in arguing before legislative committees on questions of public morality. Before the Church Congress, which met at Detroit, he read a paper on "The Proposed Parochial Mission," and another at Louisville, Ky., on "Apostolic Succession and the Historic Episcopate."

Last May he delivered the annual address before the Alumni Association of Union Theological Seminary, taking as his subject "The Need of High Churchmanship to-day." This address was most admirable, and received wide-spread notice and commendation.

For two years he was Chairman of the Citizens' High License Committee, and is still a member of it, and of the Joint Committee which drafted the High License bill which came before the Legislature of New York last winter. Undismayed by Governor Hill's vetoes the committee has just decided to draft another bill. Donald has several times served on the committees which have appeared before the Governor on this matter. In 1886 Amherst College conferred the degree of D.D. upon him, and the following year he was chosen as Trustee of the College. He is also a Trustee of the St. John Cathedral, plans for which have been submitted the past year, and Chairman of the Committee on Finance. He is a Trustee of the Home for Incurables,

Vice President of St. Johnland, and the Good Samaritan Dispensary, and Director in manifold other church and benevolent organizations, too numerous to mention. In 1888 he went abroad, visiting Great Britain and the Continent.

The shadows of sore bereavement have come upon his own home, and our classmate will have the sincere sympathy of us all. He was married April 25, 1876, to Miss Cornelia Clapp, of Washington Heights, N. Y. City. Of their five children the two eldest and the youngest have been taken from their home here. Alice, born April 2, 1877, died June 17, 1882; Francis Winchester, born February 17, 1879, died October 22, 1879; and Alan Stuart, born September 24, 1886, died November 29, 1886. Two are living, Agnes, born September 6, 1880, and Graeme, born January 27, 1882. Residence 7 West 10th Street, New York City.

CHARLES FRANCIS EASTMAN was born August 1, 1844, at Caldwell, New York. He fitted for college at Windsor Academy, Windsor, N. Y. The first two years after graduation were spent in Wilmington, Del., as teacher of Greek and German in a private school presided over by Prof. W. A. Reynolds.

In the fall of 1871, he accepted the position of principal of the High School in Beloit, Wis., remaining there for three years until forced, by the state of his health, to resign. At this same time he acted as superintendent of the public schools of Beloit. The next year was spent in Europe attending lectures at Leipsic, giving especial attention to Greek, and travelling in Germany, Italy, Switzerland, France and England. Returning in 1875, he was offered a position in Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Mass., as teacher of classics, which he accepted and filled during the next two years. In the spring of 1877, by the advice of his physician, he was forced to seek a change of employment, and to regain his health, became a farmer, removing to Easton, Md., where he now resides.

He was married at Wilmington, Del., July 12, 1876, to Miss Laura M. Buck; his brother, Rev. J. H. Eastman, performing the ceremony. They have one child, Francis Buck, born August 27, 1878.

This was the story told us ten years ago. Easton is still his home. His farm is five miles from the town, which is the most prominent place on the eastern shore of Maryland, and is finely located on Miles River, an arm of Chesapeake Bay. The lawn slopes down to the water's edge. The country about is very attractive for all who are fond of water scenery and water sports. His own health has been restored in great measure. Farming has not been the most lucrative business during the last ten years, but while financial results have not been large, the yield of experience has been heavy, and the agricultural circles of Talbot County regard Eastman as their most trustworthy authority. Of late he has been turning his attention to fruit culture, and forty acres of peach, pear, apple and plum trees were most beautiful this spring in their blossoming promise. Terrapin, oysters and canvas-backs are among the attractions he holds out to visiting classmates.

The one boy of our decennial record has had one sister and five brothers ; Mary Huse, born October 24, 1879 ; Charles Francis, born February 17, 1881 (died August 27, 1881); Charles Francis, born March 26, 1883 ; Lewis Bush, born January 31, 1885 ; John Huse, born February 16, 1887 (died August 8, 1887); and Arthur Bartlett, born August 30, 1888.

JOHN HUSE EASTMAN was born August 23, 1849, at Sandy Hill, N. Y., and fitted for college at Windsor Academy, Windsor, N. Y.

The first three years after graduation he was connected with Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., for two years as teacher of Greek and Latin in the Preparatory Department, the third year as acting Professor of Latin in the College.

September, 1872, he entered Union Theological Seminary, N. Y. City, where he pursued the regular course of three years. After graduating in May, 1875, he accepted a call to become pastor of a Presbyterian church recently organized at Katonah, Westchester Co., forty-three miles from New York, on the Harlem R. R. He was ordained by the Presbytery of Westchester and installed pastor of this church July 8, 1875. Here he still resides. He was married June 11, 1879, to Miss Lucy King, of Binghamton, N. Y., just in time to bring his wife with him to the decennial reunion at Amherst. They have two children, Elizabeth, born August 7, 1880, and Joseph Bartlett, born June 26, 1882.

He has enjoyed unbroken good health, and during the fourteen years of his pastorate had not been obliged to omit a service on account of illness until last winter, when an attack of mumps kept him in the house for a week.

In lieu of notable incident in his own career your historian takes space to record this remarkable coincidence in our class.

Four classmates graduated at Amherst in 1869, whose grandfathers graduated at Dartmouth in 1794. The grandfathers were Joshua Darling, James Hobart and Moses Eastman. The grandsons were W. O. Ballantine, J. H. Childs and C. F. and J. H. Eastman.

* AMZI BABBITT EMMONS was born at Chester, N. J., November 9, 1846, the son of Jeremiah Slaight and Esther Ann (Stout) Emmons. Left an orphan at the age of five years, his early home was with relatives, who could only supply the bare necessities of life, and whose kind care he gratefully requited in subsequent years. He was bent on obtaining an education, but was obliged to depend entirely on his own resources, working and studying as best he could. He pursued his preparatory studies partly at Chester Institute and partly with a private teacher, Mr. William Rankin. He entered our class at the beginning of Sophomore year, and immediately upon graduation began his theological course at Union Seminary, New York City. The hardships he had undergone in teaching, shorthand reporting and other labors, and in self-denying economy, in order to obtain an education, had undermined his constitution, and ill health delayed his graduation from the Theological Seminary until May, 1873. After preaching for a few months in Stratton, Vt., he was ordained to the work of the ministry at Montclair, N. J., October 28, 1873. Returning to Stratton he was acting pastor of the Congregational Church there until November, 1874. For the next three years until October, 1877, he was acting pastor of the Congregational Church at Jamaica, Vt., serving during a portion of this time as Superintendent of the Town Schools, and for a single year (1876-77) as Scribe of the Vermont Convention of Congregational Churches. In the autumn of 1877 he removed to Oxford, Worcester Co., Mass., supplying the Congregational Church of that place until October 16, 1878, when he was installed as its pastor. From the beginning of this pastorate he gave himself unsparingly to his work, and in his intense anxiety to fulfill his mission, exceeded his strength. Gradually he sank under the strain, the weary brain gave signs of yielding, he preached for the last time on the closing Sabbath of 1881, and then went for rest and medical treatment to his native county in New Jersey. But it was too late; he continued to droop, congestion of the lungs set in, and death brought him relief and rest, January 18, 1882.

He was greatly beloved by his people, and after his death his church adopted the following resolution :

Resolved, That we recognize and emulate his wonderful exemplification of the spirit of his Master, his faithful and untiring labors, his cheerful spirit of self-sacrifice, his unflinching devotion to principle and loyalty to duty.

On February 2, 1882, a memorial service was held in the church at Oxford, conducted by ministers representing the Worcester Central Association of Congregational Churches. Several hymns, written by the deceased, were sung at this service, and the warmest tributes paid to his memory by those who had been associated with him in the ministry.

Emmons was married May 28, 1873, at Chester, N. J., to Miss Melva S. Topping. Of their four children, three are living : Mary Forrester, born June 16, 1874 ; Esther Cramer, born Sept. 5, 1879 ; Moses Stone, born June 19, 1881. Floy Bradford, born Nov. 4, 1877, died May 26, 1883. Mrs. Emmons resides still in Oxford.

HENRY KELLOGG FIELD was born June 8, 1848, in the town of Newfane, Windham Co., Vt., and prepared for college in the Washington County Grammar School, at Montpelier, Vt. On leaving college he began the study of law with his father, Mr. Charles K. Field, at Brattleboro', and was admitted to the bar, September, 1871. Removing to Montpelier he formed a law partnership January 1, 1872, with C. J. Gleason. For nine years he continued the practice of law in Montpelier, but in September, 1881, accepted the position of General Agent for the Pacific Coast of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company of Boston, Mass., with headquarters at San Francisco, and removed at once with his family to that city. There he continues, and writes, "I am prospering, health is good, and fortune favors me." His residence is at 1850 Central Avenue, Alameda, Cal., but his office and business address are at 324 Montgomery Street, San Francisco.

He was married November 25, 1872, to Miss Kate L. Daniels, of Hartford, Conn. They have five children, all boys, Charles Kellogg, born September 18, 1873; Martin, born February 3, 1875; Henry Willard, born May 18, 1877; Russell Bunce, born March 24, 1880, and Allan Daniels, born October 21, 1887.

* ROSELLE ANDREW FULLER, the son of Almond and Lois (Thatcher) Fuller, was born at Philadelphia, N. Y., July 16, 1843. He was fitted for college at Genesee Wesleyan Seminary, Lima, N. Y., and entered our class at the beginning of Sophomore year. He studied theology for one year at the Bangor Theological Seminary, and after a year's interval, completed his course at Auburn, N. Y., graduating May 8, 1873. Ordained to the work of the ministry that same year, he was from the autumn of 1873 to the spring of 1874 stated supply of the Presbyterian Church at Shawano, Wis., and for three years from the autumn of 1874 stated supply of the Presbyterian Church at Colby, Wis., and preaching also at various points along the line of the Wisconsin Central R. R. Ill-health compelled his removal to El Paso, Colo., where the remainder of his life was spent, and where he died of consumption, March 20, 1880.

He was married October 15, 1875, to Miss Flora Louisa, daughter of Walter B. Booth, of Westfield, Wis. Mrs. Fuller died January 17, 1881. They were both buried at Colorado Springs. Mr. Booth writes that their only child, Lois Eliza, born September 14, 1876, has a home with her grandparents in Westfield, Wis., is in good health and well provided for.

GEORGE MERRILL GAGE was born at Chicago, Ill., February 17, 1849, and fitted for college at the Lake Forest Academy. After graduation he returned to his native city, and engaged in an active business life, entering first the employ of the Garden City Insurance Company. Early in 1870 he transferred his services to the State Savings Institution, where he remained for two years, occupying successively the positions of messenger, assistant teller, and bookkeeper. In the spring of 1872, he accepted the position of teller in the Fidelity Savings Bank and Safe Depository. The following year he was appointed assistant cashier, and occupied this position until the fall of 1877. Early in 1878 he became the financial editor of the Chicago Evening Post. Owing to the death of Mr. Willard, the editor, which occurred soon after, the affairs of the paper were thrown into confusion, the creditors took possession and placed Gage in charge as business manager. July 2, 1878, the paper was absorbed by the Chicago News. Meantime Gage had been doing the work of half a dozen men, more or less, and as the result of the overwork and anxiety was prostrated by two severe hemorrhages of the lungs. This necessitated rest, which continued until the spring of 1879, during which time he took a trip to Minnesota. Resuming work he became a member of the firm of Charles J. Haines & Co., engaged in a general real estate and loaning business. In 1880 he went into the employ of A. H. Beardsley & Co., as cashier, and remained with them until 1886, when he was appointed Manager for the Central Livery Company. The following winter the state of his health obliged him to seek a milder climate and he went to San Diego, Cal. While there he carried on a real estate loan business as a member of the firm of John H. Ferry & Co. In the spring of 1888 he removed to Salt Lake City. Last fall he brought his family there and is now living at 252 East 1st Street. He is employed in the U. S. Land Office.

Gage was married July 17, 1881, to Sarah E. Valentine, daughter of J. Lewis Curtis, of Chicago.

RICHARD GOODMAN, JR., was born in New York City April 2, 1846, and prepared for college at the Edwards Place School, Stockbridge, Mass. From Amherst he went to Harvard University to study law, receiving the degree of LL.B., June, 1871. The next six months were spent abroad, in England and on the continent. On his return he resumed his law studies in the office of Hillard, Hyde & Dickinson, Boston, Mass., and was admitted to the bar in 1872. After practicing two years in Boston he removed to New York, remaining for a year in the offices of Sanford, Robinson & Woodruff. Here ends the legal chapter in his history. In 1877, turning his back upon the strifes of courts and the distractions of the metropolis, Goodman sought again the Berkshire Hills, and has since resided at his father's country seat in Lenox. Here he has devoted himself to the breeding of Jersey cattle, to butter-making, and has become an acknowledged authority upon these and kindred topics. He is a valued contributor to the leading agricultural papers of the country, and has gained an enviable reputation as a lecturer upon husbandry. But alas ! he still abides in the positive degree, a Goodman only, and not a better man from lack of adding the better-half. Dwelling in the most attractive village our country can boast, he has been a leader in all matters pertaining to its welfare, sewage, water supply, circulating library, social and literary societies.

Residence and P. O. address, Lenox, Mass.

WILLIAM PENN HAMMOND was born at Plympton, Mass., September 15, 1843, and fitted for college at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass. After leaving college he began at once the study of medicine, entering the medical department of Harvard University, where he remained for two years, and then went as student to the United States Marine Hospital at Chelsea. Subsequently he served as house officer at the Boston City Hospital for one year, after which he returned to Harvard, receiving the degree of M. D. from that institution in 1873. He began the practice of his profession at once in the Bunker Hill District of Boston. A year later he accepted the appointment of assistant surgeon of the out-patient department of the hospital, which he filled for one year. Since that time he has continued his private practice, making but one change, from 401 Main St. to 47 Monument Square, having possessed himself of a commodious house under the shadow of Bunker Hill Monument. In his own words : "No more history can be written upon my sheet ; no more children, no more honors. I have simply lived the life of an honest, hard-working physician, seeing and knowing little else of this world but pain, suffering and death." A careless reader might infer from this that Hammond's patients never get well, but he has omitted to mention how much he has seen and known of relief from pain, convalescence and full recovery of health, far more than falls to the lot of the ordinary physician.

September 17, 1873, he was married to Miss Sarah Abbie Harrub. They have one child, Bessie P., born July 9, 1874.

MYRON OSCAR HARRINGTON was born January 6, 1844, at Kirby, Vt., and fitted for college at the Caledonia Academy, Peacham, Vt. After graduation he taught for two years in the High School at Medway, Mass. The summer of 1871 was spent at his home in Vermont on account of the illness of his father, and in the autumn he entered Andover Theological Seminary, where he remained until May 6, 1872, when he became principal of the Danvers, Mass., High School. This position he occupied until November 28, 1873. During the first three months of 1874 he was in Tougaloo University near Jackson, Miss., but returned to Vermont and remained until April, 1875, at St. Johnsbury, recruiting health and studying. He then took charge of the Lycoming County Classical and Normal Institute at Muncy, Pa., but in the autumn resumed his studies at Andover, graduating in July, 1877. He was ordained at Danvers, Mass., October 5, 1877, by a Congregational Council, and went at once to Macon, Ga., where he labored as a missionary of the American Missionary Association until August 28, 1878. His next field of labor was Bonne Terre, Mo., from October, 1878, to July, 1879. He was installed as pastor of the Congregational Church at Kidder, Mo., July 19, 1879, where he remained for nearly four years. From May 29, 1883, until June, 1884, he preached at Stewartsville, Mo., and from the latter date until September 6, 1886, at Mound City, Kansas. During a portion of his residence in Missouri he was President of the Missouri S. S. Association. Since September, 1886, his address has been Topeka, Kan., where his family resides at 932 Spruce St. He is now supplying the Congregational Church of Russell, a prairie town of 1,000 population, about 200 miles west of Topeka.

Harrington was married September 28, 1877, to Miss Mary E. Smith, of Sunderland, Mass. They have three children; Mary Elizabeth, born August 27, 1880 (died May 19, 1883, of scarlet fever); William Murray, born October 23, 1883, and Annie Nellie, born February 24, 1886.

WATERMAN THOMAS HEWETT was born in Miami, Saline County, Missouri, January 10, 1846. After the death of his father the family removed to South Paris, Me., and he prepared for college at the Maine State Seminary, now the Nichols Latin School, in Lewiston. He entered Amherst College in September, 1864, as a member of the class of 1868. Called home in October, 1867, by the illness of his brother, he did not return to college until the autumn of 1868, when he entered our class, with which he graduated. He then went abroad with Prof. W. S. Tyler, in order to study Modern Greek in Athens, where he attended lectures in the University, and travelled over a considerable portion of Greece. In the spring of 1870 he went to Italy, and finally established himself in Heidelberg, Germany. At the breaking out of the Franco-German War he was travelling in Denmark. His plans being thus interrupted, he returned home after a brief residence in Paris. On his return he was elected Assistant Professor of Modern Languages in Iowa State University, and at the same time offered the principalship of the Classical Department of the Whipple Academy, connected with Illinois College, but declined both positions. Soon after he accepted the position of Assistant Professor of German in Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., where he has since resided. In 1879 he received the degree of Ph.D. from Cornell University. In 1883 he was elected Professor of the German Language and Literature. He has received on two occasions leave of absence, and spent 1877-78 in study at the University of Leipzig, and several months in Leiden, studying the literature of the Netherlands. In 1887-88 he resided in Berlin and Paris for purposes of study. He is the author of "The Frisian Language and Literature; an Historical Study," published in 1879; and has contributed to the Nation, American Journal of Philology, Modern Language Notes, Harpers' Monthly, The Atlantic, Science, The Academy, The Goethe Jahrbuch, and The London Academy. "The Life and Genius of Goethe" was published by him in 1886, made up of lectures delivered at the Concord School of Philosophy; in 1887 "The Poetry and Philosophy of Goethe," lectures delivered before the Milwaukee Literary School. He has also edited the "Transactions of the Modern Language Association," and the "Proceedings of the University Convocation of the State of New York for 1886." He has lectured also upon Early Christian and Mediæval Art. For his contributions upon the Frisian Language he was elected member extraordinary of the Frisian Society of History, Antiquities and Philology, and of the Society for the Frisian Language and Literature of Holland. He is a member of the American Philological Society, the Modern Language Association, and the Goethe Society of Weimar.

He was married June 22, 1880, to Miss Emma McChain, of Ithaca, who died September 18, 1883. He has no children. Address 31 East Avenue, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

WILLIAM ROSCOE HOBBIIE was born at Unity, Me., December 22, 1848, and fitted for college at the Central High School, Cleveland, O. For the three years succeeding graduation he was associated with A. J. Johnson, the New York publisher, as general agent. In March, 1872, he organized the Phoenix Paper Company, with H. L. Mowry and L. W. Haskins as partners. The office of the company is at Greenwich, Washington Co., N. Y., and the mill, which was built the following summer, at Battenville. In the fall of 1878, Hobbie bought out the entire business, but after a time became associated again in business with his former partner, H. L. Mowry, and the firm remains as then constituted. Ten years ago the product of their mill was two and a half tons daily. How much that product has since increased we know not, but the paper of the company still stands at the head of the market. Hobbie writes : " I have passed the years in a quiet, uneventful manner, steadily engaged in my business. I have not had time to engage in political matters, save to attend to my duties as an American citizen, which means a constant and comprehensive knowledge of the thoughts and feelings of my townsmen and regular discharge of individual duty. I have felt obliged to decline a larger sphere of action, although I have consented to act as Supervisor of my town, and under pressure of such campaigns as last fall have taken the stump at times."

Hobbie also draws a most charming picture of himself and family gathered about the fireside of a winter's evening, while he discourses eloquently to them of the class of '69, and points to the men who have attained to eminence in church and state.

He extends a hearty invitation to all to visit them in their home. These are his words :

" Come in the evening, or come in the morning,
Come when you're looked for, or come without warning,

and you will always find a welcome awaiting you."

A wife and three children will join in the welcome. Mrs. Hobbie was Miss Phoebe Walsh, of Greenwich, N. Y., to whom he was married June 2, 1880. The three children are Phoebe Elizabeth, born July 12, 1881 ; Edward Walsh, born March 15, 1884 ; and Marian, born August 23, 1888.

WILLIAM JACOB HOLLAND was born August 16, 1848, at Bethany, a Moravian mission station on the island of Jamaica. His preparation for college was begun as a private pupil of Mr. William Meinung, of Salem, N. C., an instructor of considerable note in that part of the South. In 1863, coming North with his parents, he entered, at an advanced standing, the Moravian College and Theological Seminary at Bethlehem, Penn. He remained here nearly four years, during the last year reading theology. After an interval of six months, during which he devoted himself to the study of the art of painting, he entered Amherst College, January, 1868. For two years after graduation he was engaged in teaching, first as principal of the High School at Amherst, and afterward occupying a similar position at Westborough,

Mass. In the fall of 1871, he entered the Theological Seminary at Princeton, where he remained for the regular course of three years, graduating in 1874. While connected with the seminary he was actively engaged in preaching, both in vacation and term time, supplying the pulpits of the Second and Fourth Moravian Churches in Philadelphia, and subsequently the Presbyterian Church at Chestnut Hill, and the Central Congregational Church in the same city. He was ordained as a deacon in the Moravian Church May 12, 1872, by Bishop William Bigler. Upon graduation from Princeton he severed his connection with the Moravian Church, and accepted a call to the pastorate of the Bellefield Presbyterian Church in the city of Pittsburg, Pa., where he was formally installed June 12, 1874. During his pastorate over 550 persons have been added to the church, and its present membership is nearly 400. During the fifteen years in which Holland has ministered to this people they have contributed nearly $200,000 to benevolent objects and are now engaged in building a new audience room, which when completed will cost $55,000. He has visited Europe twice, in 1877 as a delegate to the Pan Presbyterian Council, which met in Edinboro', and in 1879 as a delegate to the meeting of the Evangelical Alliance at Basle. On both occasions he travelled extensively in Great Britain and on the Continent. In 1887 he went with Prof. David P. Todd, of Amherst College, to Japan as the naturalist of the expedition sent out by the National Academy of Science and the U. S. Navy Department to observe the total eclipse of the sun, which took place August 19 of that year. He travelled over the greater part of the empire and made extensive collections representing the fauna and flora of the islands. The results of this expedition brought Holland so prominently before the Government as a naturalist that he has recently been asked to go to Africa for a similar purpose, with the promise of a large salary and efficient assistants, an offer which he will probably accept.

During his foreign tours Holland has acted as the special correspondent of a number of the leading papers of the country. He has also published a number of lectures and discourses, and many papers devoted to the natural sciences, illustrating the latter by plates, which he has for the most part himself drawn and engraved. He is now engaged in writing a book upon Japan, and a history of the Presbyterian Church in Western Pennsylvania. He was for eight years clerk of the Presbytery of Pittsburgh, and in 1886 one of the clerks of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. He has for fifteen years been one of the Trustees of the Pennsylvania Female College, and for twelve years a Trustee of the Western Theological Seminary at Allegheny, and since 1888 the Vice-President of the Board. He is a Director of the School of Design for Women in Pittsburgh and President of the Iron City Microscopical Society. He is a member of the Pennsylvania Historical Society, of the American Association for the advancement of Science, of the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia, a Fellow of the Entomological Society of London, and one of the Life members of the Entomological Society of France, beside belonging to half a dozen other historical and literary associations of this country and Europe.

Prof. C. V. Riley, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture in a recent publication says that "the collection of the butterflies of North America made by Dr. Holland is typically the most perfect in existence."

The degree of Ph.D. was conferred upon him by Washington and Jefferson College in 1886, and that of D.D. by his Alma Mater in 1888.

He was married January 23, 1879, to Miss Carrie T. Moorhead, of Pittsburgh, Pa. Their first child, John Moorhead, born February 11, 1881, died February 22, 1881. They have two children living, Moorhead Benezet, born September 3, 1884, and Francis Raymond, born January 10, 1886.

CLARENCE LINDEN HOWES was born at Mattapoisett, Mass., March 24, 1848, and fitted for college at Hanover Academy, Hanover, Mass. For two years after graduation he was engaged in teaching in the public school of Pembroke, Mass., Spencertown Academy, Austerlitz, N. Y., and the High School of Rockland, Mass. In the fall of 1871, he entered upon a course of study in the higher mathematics and modern languages in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology at Boston, where he received the degree of S.B. in the C. E. department in 1873. For the next two years, until the close of 1875, he practiced the profession of civil engineer, being employed in the U. S. Harbor and River Survey, the U. S. Coast Survey, on the Troy and Greenfield R. R., in the vicinity of the Hoosac Tunnel, and in land surveying near Boston. In 1876 he began the study of medicine, and while prosecuting his studies taught for a year in the Eliot Grammar and Boston Latin Schools. He took his first course of lectures at the medical school connected with Dartmouth College, in the fall of 1877, and the second at the Long Island College Hospital, where he received the degree of M.D. June, 1878. He at once began the practice of his profession in Hanover, Mass., where he still resides. He was married October 3, 1878, to Miss Mary O. Hapgood, of Worcester. They have two children, Frederick Hapgood, born August 29, 1879, and Caroline Bradford, born July 8, 1883. For the last eight years he has been Chairman of the School Committee of the town. After an absence of eighteen years from Amherst, Howes was present at the recent reunion of the class. He easily captured and carried off the honors of the class supper by his "desultory remarks" and the song he had composed for the occasion.

WILLIAM AMASA KEESE was born December 23, 1846, at Louisville, Miss., and fitted for college at the High School, Lowell, Mass.

The first year after graduation was spent in teaching in a private school at Stamford, Conn. He then began his theological studies at the Seminary at Newton, Mass. During his Seminary course he filled an important position for several months in the Literary and Scientific Institute of New London, N. H. Graduating at Newton in 1873, he was ordained July 31, of that year, and became pastor of the Baptist church of Ellsworth, Me. After a most successful pastorate of four years he accepted a call, April 1877, to the Calvary Baptist Church, of Salem, Mass. Here he remained until June 1883, when he resigned and spent the summer in travel in Europe. The following autumn he resumed work again as pastor of the Cary Avenue Baptist Church, of Chelsea, Mass. This relationship continued until December, 1888, when he resigned, with a view to a change in his denominational status. In February, 1889, he accepted a call to the Trinity Congregational Church in Lawrence, Mass., and was installed as pastor, April 11, 1889.

He has been most happy and successful in his ministry. We never suspected him of anything but cheerfulness, but he writes: "The effect of a peaceful life, with a reasonable average of health and comfort, and all the appreciation I have deserved, has undermined a certain melancholy which sometimes troubled me, and I believe I am now as serene and cheerful as the majority."

Keese was married February 15, 1876, to Miss Elizabeth E. Hedge of East Charlotte, Vt. They have three daughters, Marion Ashton, born May 2, 1881; Ethel Margaret, born October 25, 1882, and Ruth Esther, born February 18, 1884.

JOHN EDWARD KELLOGG was born in Amherst, Mass., July 2, 1845. His preparation for college was begun at the Amherst Academy, continued at the Amherst High School, and completed at the Williston Seminary, East-Hampton, in the class of 1865.

Since graduation he has devoted himself to journalism. For sixteen months he was connected with the Springfield Republican, then for eighteen months with the New England Associated Press in New York City. Then for six months he was engaged upon the Taunton Gazette, Taunton, Mass.

In February, 1873, he bought an interest in the Sentinel Printing Company, of Fitchburg, Mass., and in May of that year the first number of the Fitchburg Daily Sentinel was issued. Since that time Kellogg has been one-half owner, and editor of the Sentinel. Of this paper the History of Fitchburg, published in 1887, says: "The Daily Sentinel has been well conducted, and has continued vigorous and healthy to the present time. In October, 1881, the paper was enlarged, again in September, 1885, and a third time in October, 1886."

Kellogg has contributed at various times to several of the New York papers, and is the Fitchburg agent of the Associated Press. He has also served as Clerk of the Common Council of Fitchburg.

Kellogg is wedded to his profession of journalism, but not otherwise, so far as we can learn.

* ALVAH BAYLIES KITTREDGE, son of Rev. Charles Baker and Sarah (Brigham) Kittredge, was born at Westborough, Mass., February 3, 1845. He began his preparation for college at Groton Academy, of which he was a member about one year. July 17, 1864, he enlisted in the 6th Regiment Massachusetts Infantry, which was stationed a short time at Arlington Heights, and for the rest of his term of service at Fort Delaware in charge of rebel prisoners. He was regularly discharged October 27, 1864, and then completed his preparation for college with the Rev. James Tufts, of Monson. Immediately upon his graduation he was appointed instructor in gymnastics in Amherst College, a place for which he was well fitted by his service as captain of his class during the whole of the college course. He remained nearly a year in this position, but was compelled to leave Amherst during the month of June on account of pulmonary hemorrhage. He was married October 3, 1870, to Miss Alice W. Gordon, of Auburndale, Mass., and died the following day at his father's residence in Westborough, Mass. His death placed the first star upon the roll of the graduate members of our class.

STEPHEN HOLMES LARNED was born July 10, 1847, at Dudley, and fitted for college at Nichols Academy in his native town. For many years after graduation he was engaged as an accountant. The first year was spent with the Messrs. Slater, woolen, cotton, and linen manufacturers at Webster, Mass. Then for three years he was in the employ of N. A. Lombard & Co., manufacturers of machinery at Worcester, Mass. In 1873 he accepted a position with the Sargent Card Clothing Company in the same city, with whom he remained until the autumn of 1884. During these years his position grew to be one of great responsibility, involving no little supervision of the entire business in the absence of the members of the firm, and substantial evidence was given of their appreciation of his valuable services. In the latter part of 1884 he engaged in business for himself in the manufacture of special lines of hardware, building up a large and excellent trade. But the "freezing out" policy of older and stronger competitors made the enterprise unsatisfactory, and after two years he disposed of his entire plant in Worcester, and entered a new field, silk manufacturing. Since the autumn of 1886 he has filled the position of general superintendent and manager of the manufacturing of the Standard Silk Company of New York City, with mills at Paterson and Phillipsburg, N. J., and at Tobyhanna, Pa. He resides at Phillipsburg. He writes that he finds the business both congenial and fascinating, that he is not known to fame, never seeking, nor sought, for public honors, but in a quiet round of daily duty trying by honest living to reflect credit upon his Alma Mater. He has recently been elected Vice-President of the Company.

Larned has been twice married. His first wife was Miss Hattie N. Boltwood, of Amherst, Mass., to whom he was married July 20, 1872, and who died May 27, 1873. Their child, a son, died in infancy.

He was again married, January 5, 1876, to Miss Susie M. Everett, of Worcester, Mass. Of their two children, the elder, Margaret, born June 28, 1884, is living ; but the younger, Helen, born September 2, 1887, was taken from their care August 9, 1888.

FRANCIS DRAPER LEWIS was born in Boston, Mass., August 29, 1849, and prepared for college at the Academy of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Philadelphia, Pa. The two years after graduation were spent as a law student at Harvard University, from which he received the degree of LL.B. in June, 1871. The following September he entered the law offices of John C. Bullitt, Esq., one of the leading lawyers of the Philadelphia bar. After his admission to the bar, May 23, 1872, he remained with Mr. Bullitt until March, 1873, when he formed a law partnership with Charles E. Morgan, Jr., Esq.

This partnership still continues with offices at 411 Walnut Street. Much might be said about his success in his profession. It may all be summed up in this, that he has found a place, where it has been said there is always room, at the top.

The summer of 1887 was spent in Europe.

Lewis kindly contributes two "salient points" in his career during the past ten years, upon both of which the class will most heartily congratulate him. He was married April 28, 1887, to Miss Mary Humphreys Chandler, of Germantown, Philadelphia, by the Rev. E. Winchester Donald, D.D. A daughter, Mary Chandler Lewis, was born August 11, 1888.

Residence, East Washington Lane, Germantown.

GEORGE MCCORMICK was born at Spring Run, Franklin Co., Pa., November 24, 1847, and prepared for college at the academy in his native place, studying for a time also at Shade Gap Academy, and also at Academia, Pa. His theological course of three years was taken at the United Presbyterian Seminary, at Allegheny City, Pa., from which he graduated in March, 1872. During the summer of 1870 he taught in a normal school at Dayton, Pa., and from July to October, 1871, he supplied the United Presbyterian Church of Centreville, Mich. In the Summer of 1872 he accepted a call to the church in Butler, Pa., beginning work there July 21, and was ordained and installed pastor October 22 of that year. Having visited California in March, 1873, on his return he was released from his pastorate at Butler, and removed in August to Salinas City, Cal., the county seat of Monterey Co. Here he became pastor of the United Presbyterian Church, and here he continues after a pastorate of sixteen years, an exceptionally long one for the Pacific Coast. His expectation of doing his life work there seems in a fair way of fulfilment. He has been greatly prospered in his work and his church has grown steadily in number and in strength. He preaches without notes, and last year in his zeal for prohibition took the stump for Fisk and Brooks.

He visited the Atlantic States in 1883, and in 1886 came as far East as Kansas to attend a family reunion. He is the author of a Normal Course of "Hints and Helps to Bible Students."

He was married to Miss Annie E. Ferguson, at Dry Run, Pa., April 18, 1872. Their first child, Mary Blythe, born February 7, 1873, died December 31, 1876. Another daughter, Annie Elizabeth, was born May 5, 1878.

JAMES MCNEILL was born September 18, 1846, at his present place of abode in the town of Greenport, in the suburbs of the city of Hudson, N. Y. He fitted for college at the Classical Institute, Hudson. After graduating he remained at home for several years, devoting himself to literary work, and finding health and recreation in the pursuit of agriculture. His attention was drawn to the subject of phrenology, and the result cannot be given better than in his own words. "Instead of finding a species of fortune-telling, unworthy the attention of a liberally educated man, which is the generally received idea of the subject, I discovered that it was a system of mental philosophy, clear, complete and definite, one giving an exposition of the phenomena of mind eminently rational and practically useful. I took a course of instruction at the Phrenological Institute, New York, and have since devoted myself with considerable zeal to the subject. In the fall of 1874 I took a trip to Nevada and California, where I remained for two years. On my return in November, 1876, I entered into an agreement with the Phrenological Journal to write a series of articles on health and on phrenology as contrasted with the mental philosophies of the schools. This occupied me about a year. On the completion of this task, the editor of the Journal requested me to co-operate with him in the preparation of an elementary work on phrenology which might be used as a text book. I am an earnest advocate of the laws which the Creator has imposed on our physical and mental constitutions ; and I have no higher ambition in life than to be considered a successful teacher and promulgator of the principles of physiology, hygiene and phrenology."

This was ten years ago. McNeill now writes that the past ten years have been spent mostly at home, In 1879 the book referred to above was published. It is entitled "Brain and Mind," and has had a very good sale. A work on metal science founded on phrenology is now in contemplation.

In 1880 he became interested in bee culture and has since been extensively engaged in the raising of bees, queens, and honey. But sad to tell, he has no queen for his own hive.

HENRY MARTYN MATTHEWS was born at Covington, Wyoming county, N. Y., and fitted for college at Middlebury Academy, N. Y. The first three years of his college course were spent at Union College, and he entered Amherst at the beginning of Junior year. After graduation, he began the study of law in the office of Nichols & Robbins, Buffalo, N. Y., about January 1, 1870. Afterwards he entered the office of Laning, Folsom & Willett, with whom he was studying when admitted to the bar about January 1, 1872. Mr. Folsom, of this firm, was the father of Mrs. Grover Cleveland. Going West in the latter part of 1872, Matthews entered the office of Barker, Wait & Hopkins, Chicago, Ill. He was admitted to the bar of Illinois, February 25, 1873, and to the U. S. Circuit and District Courts, April 28, of the same year. May 1, 1874, he began practice for himself with an office at 88 Washington Street, in 1879 was at 152 La Salle Street, but is now located in the Tacoma Building, N. E. corner La Salle and Madison Streets. He is engaged in a general law practice, which has brought him before all the State Courts, and the U. S. Circuit and District Courts, and has built up for himself a lucrative practice and a well-deserved reputation.

In 1882 he formed a law partnership with Edward A. Dicker, and the firm of Matthews & Dicker this spring moved into new and elegant offices on the eleventh floor of the Tacoma Building, No. 1109.

In one direction alone is he an unsafe counselor, or, it may be, an unsuccessful advocate. He is still unmarried.

MARCUS WHITMAN MONTGOMERY was born June 21, 1839, at Prattsburg, N. Y. While yet in his teens he served as a stenographer in the legislature of Missouri, and at the age of twenty was editor and proprietor of a newspaper at Portland, Jay County, Ind., even at that early age giving evidence of fine business capacity, making his paper a financial success. At the end of three years, desiring a better education, he sold his paper, and fitted for college in the preparatory department of Wheaton College, Ill. Removing to Amherst he completed his preparation with Prof. C. H. Parkhurst (class of 1866), and entered college in the spring of Freshman year. After graduation he went into business in Cleveland, O., where he remained until 1875, making in this time about $25,000. Sudden reverses swept it away, and he took the consequent opportunity of release from business care to complete his preparation for the ministry. His theological course of three years was taken at Yale Theological Seminary, where he graduated May 16, 1878. During his seminary course he prepared a "History of the English Bible," but it is not yet ready for publication. After graduating at Yale Seminary, he was urged to take charge of a Congregational church in Fort Scott, Kan., with the special end in view of raising money to pay off a heavy debt resting upon the church. In June he visited the place, undertook the work, and returning to the East, spent the summer in raising the necessary funds. The entire indebtedness of $10,000 was canceled. Montgomery was settled as pastor of the church in November, 1878. His labors were richly blessed, and a good work done.

Finding that climate unsuitable, in 1880 he took the New England agency of Washburn College, Topeka, Kan., and removed to Newtonville, Mass., but was hardly settled in his new work, when he was called by the American Home Missionary Society to be its superintendent for Minnesota and Northern Dakota. Accepting the call he removed in 1881 to Minneapolis, where he still resides.

In 1884 he visited Sweden and Norway to investigate the free-church movement in those countries, and on his return wrote the book entitled, "A Wind from the Holy Spirit in Sweden and Norway." This report made a profound impression among the Congregational churches, and awakened them to the great and pressing need of missionary work among the Scandinavians in our country. Montgomery was desired by the American Home Missionary Society to take the superintendence of this new work. In this work he has been engaged for the last four years, and has given himself to it with apostolic zeal and devotion.

In his annual report of last year he states that there were on January 1, 1888, not less than two million Scandinavians in the United States, including nearly one half the present population of Minnesota. That element of her population in Minnesota has doubled within five years.

At the request of the Secretaries of the Society, Montgomery visited Utah in the autumn of 1887, where the Scandinavian Mormon population is estimated at 40,000. He gives the results of that visit in his report, and the following quotation will be of special interest :

“The next step taken was to do what the Lord burdened me to do against the mighty wickedness of Mormonism by seeking to awaken the public conscience to protest against the admission of Utah into the Union as a State. This I did by writing an article for the Congregationalist, by making twenty addresses on Mormonism in various parts of the country, and by addressing the United States Senate Committee on Territories. To stem the tide of Scandinavian Mormon converts from the Old World, I wrote an article entitled 'Mormonism Unmasked, a Warning to the Scandinavians,' containing some 9,000 words specially prepared for the situation among these people, in which it was sought to lay bare the frauds and frightful enormities of this great evil. This article was translated into Swedish, and into Dano-Norwegian. Proof-sheets were sent to all the Scandinavian newspapers in the United States, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Finland and Iceland, being nearly 1,000 newspapers. In many of them it has already appeared. By this method it may fairly be said that we have reached about all the Scandinavian people with this exposure of Mormonism, which can scarcely fail to counteract, to some degree at least, the work of the Mormon missionaries among these people."

He has since written another book which is now passing through the press, entitled "The Whole Story about the Mormons."

In March, 1889, he again visited Sweden, and is at present in Stockholm, where he expects to remain several months studying the Scandinavian languages.

Montgomery was married July 20, 1859, at Pennville, Ind., to Miss Mary R. Votaw.

They have four children : Emma B., born October 19, 1862 ; Plymouth G., born March 15, 1866 ; Whitman M., born September 8, 1872, and Forest H., born August 22, 1874.

Residence and P. O. address, 408 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

CHARLES STEDMAN NEWHALL was born October 4, 1842, at Boston, Mass., and fitted for college at Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Mass.

In the fall of 1869 he began the study of theology at Union Theological Seminary, New York City, where he graduated in 1872. After travelling for a few months at the South, he became pastor of the Congregational Church in Oriskany Falls, N. Y., where he was ordained December 11, 1872, and where he remained for a year and a half. In 1874 he became the acting pastor of a Presbyterian Church in Oceanic, N. J. This was his field of labor until January, 1879, when he went abroad, going directly to Constantinople, and making the tour of Egypt and the Holy Land.

Soon after his return home he went out to Iowa and spent four years in that State, from 1880 to 1882 in charge of the Congregational Church at Postville, and from October, 1882 to 1884 at Tipton. Returning East, after a year at Plainfield, N. J., in 1885 he became stated supply of the Presbyterian Church at Keeseville, Essex Co., N. Y., where he remained for two years. He is now in charge of the Presbyterian Church at Point Pleasant, N. J.

Literary work has from time to time occupied his attention, and he has published several volumes. His "History of Fall River" has gained him distinction as a local historian, and three books for the Sunday School Library have been widely commended. "Joe and the Howards; or Armed with Eyes," appeared soon after he left college, and was calculated to awaken the interest of children in natural history. "Harry's Trip to the Orient," published by the American Tract Society, presents the story of eastern travel in a way to fascinate the boys; and "Ruthie's Story," recently issued by the Presbyterian Board of Publication, gives the story of Jesus as told by one girl to others.

Newhall has amended his report of ten years ago. He is no longer a bachelor. His marriage to Miss Kitty Harvey, of Oceanic, N. J., occurred March 7, 1881. They have three children, Charles A., born March 6, 1882; Luther, born February 9, 1884, and Katherine, born October 5, 1886.

P. O. address, Point Pleasant, N. J.

JOHN ADAMS PAGE was born in Haverhill, Mass., October 27, 1847, and fitted for college at the High School of his native place. After graduation he taught for two years, first as principal of the academy at Penfield, Monroe Co., N. Y.; afterward as principal of the High School at Ashland, Mass., and finally as assistant in a boys' boarding school at Flatbush, L. I. The next three years were spent in New York city, as cashier and book-keeper for Dodd & Mead, book publishers.

In 1874 he returned to Haverhill, and in the autumn began the study of law in the office of ex-Mayor J. K. Jennes. Admitted to the bar March 12, 1878, he remained in the same office, as the associate of Mr. Jennes, until September, 1879, when he opened an office by himself and soon became established in a lucrative practice. In 1882 he became the cashier of the Haverhill Co-operative Bank, continuing at the same time his law practice. This arrangement continued for five years, when the strain of double work made itself felt, and in October, 1887, his health gave way completely so that he was obliged to resign his position in the bank and close his law office. During the winter and spring of 1888, with his wife (Page was married September 15, 1886, to Miss Annie D. Webb, of Bradford, Mass.) he travelled extensively in the South in search of health, and spent much of the following summer in the British Provinces. Last November he re-opened his office and has been able to do some business, with health partially restored.

In March, 1889, he writes: "I am very slowly, but steadily, gaining, though still far from being entirely well. It pains me very much to think that I shall not be able to be at the class re-union this summer."

Address, Daggett Building, Haverhill, Mass.

CHARLES RANSOM PRATT was born January 24, 1847, at Elmira, N. Y., and fitted for college at the Union School, Schenectady, N. Y. Entering Union College in 1865, he took the first three years of his college course in that institution, entering our class at the beginning of Senior year.

After graduation he studied law in Elmira, N. Y., and was admitted to the bar January, 1872. He has resided in Elmira ever since, attending to his law practice, and since September, 1879, when he became Cashier of the Second National Bank of Elmira, combining with it banking. He was Cashier until January, 1886, and is now Vice-President of the bank.

Pratt was married April 10, 1879, to Miss Jane E. Carrier, of Cuba, N. Y. They have three children, Ransom, born April 16, 1880 ; Alvord, born November 8, 1881, and Sarah, born February 18, 1886.

AMOS BANCROFT PUTNAM was born February 27, 1846, at Groton, Mass., and fitted for college at Lawrence Academy in his native place.

For a year after graduation he was engaged in teaching at Grantville, in the town of Needham, Mass. In 1870 he engaged in business and for several years was a manufacturer at Nashua, N. H. In 1878 he removed to Boston, and entered the office of Morss & Whyte, 75 Cornhill, in whose employ he still remains. They are extensive wire manufacturers. For a time he resided in Cambridgeport, but his home is now at 91 Bowdoin Street.

He was married January 4, 1873, to Miss Fannie Farnsworth, of Groton, Mass. His wife died in 1887.

JOHN WILLIAM QUINBY was born October 4, 1833, at Coxsackie, Greene County, N. Y., and fitted for college at Fairfield Seminary, Herkimer County, N. Y. His studies were interrupted by service in the army during the Rebellion, and he entered Amherst at the beginning of the Junior year. After graduation he spent a year and a half at the Divinity School at Cambridge, Mass., and September 7, 1871, was settled as pastor of the Unitarian Church of East Bridgewater, Mass. Here he still remains.

HENRY BULLARD RICHARDSON was born in Franklin, Mass., May 21, 1844. He prepared for college at Phillips Academy, Exeter, N. H. In September, 1869, he entered upon his duties as Instructor in Latin and Greek, at Amherst College, and occupied that position until March, 1873, when he went abroad, remaining until September, traveling in France, Switzerland, Germany and Italy. The next three years were spent in Springfield, Mass., as classical teacher in the High School of that city. In the summer of 1876 he went a second time to Europe, and studied classical philology for two years in the University of Leipsic. During this time he also traveled in Italy, Germany, Holland, and Great Britain. On his return, in the autumn of 1888, he again became a member of the faculty of Amherst, this time as Instructor in Latin and German. In 1879 he was made Assistant Professor of Latin and Instructor in German. Since 1882 his title has been Professor of German. Three more summers of travel and study in Europe in 1885, 1886, and 1888, have added to his already rich equipment for the duties of his professorship. He is now a Teuton of the Teutons. He has built for himself a beautiful home in Amherst on "Faculty" Street, where a young son of eight years now receives a share of the training which at the time of our last report was bestowed upon two daughters.

Prof. Richardson has made several valuable contributions to the literature of both of the departments in which he has given instruction. He assisted Prof. E. P. Crowell in preparing an edition of Cicero's "De Senectute" and "De Amicitia" for Chase and Stuart's series of classical text books. This was published in 1872. He translated and edited from the German of Bender "A Brief History of Roman Literature," issued by Ginn & Heath in 1872. In 1887 he prepared a complete glossary to Lessing's "Emilia Galotti," and is now engaged upon an annotated edition of the same work. He has also in preparation a "Handbook of German Civilization."

Richardson was the first of our class to marry after graduation. The date was July 13, 1869, and his wife was Miss Mary E. Lincoln, of Amherst. The two daughters, mentioned above, are Mary Lincoln, born February 17, 1871, and Carrie Anna, born July 6, 1874. The son is Henry Stephen, born January 17, 1881.

JOHN KENDALL RICHARDSON was born July 11, 1843, at Woburn, Mass., and fitted for college at Warren Academy and the High School of his native town.

After graduation, he returned to Amherst as Instructor in Mathematics, and occupied this position for three years. During this time he also gave instruction for two terms in the Massachusetts Agricultural College. In the spring of 1872 he accepted the principalship of the Amherst High School, but held it only two terms, resigning the following November. On the twenty-third of this month he sailed for Europe, accompanied by his wife. They were about nine months traveling in Great Britain, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, and France, and studying for three months at Gottingen, and two months at Leipsic. Immediately on his return he became Instructor in Classics in Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Mass., and remained there for three years, during the last year having entire charge of all the Latin instruction of the school. Resigning in the summer of 1876, he accepted a thrice-offered position as principal of the classic department of the Chickering Institute, in Cincinnati, Ohio. Impaired health and an intense desire to return to Eastern customs and standards of classical study, brought him back, at the end of a year, to New England. In the autumn of 1877 he received an appointment in the Boston Latin School as Junior Master. This position he held until 1885, when he became a Master in the same institution, and this position he still occupies. He has published a work on "Ancient America"; also the "Doings of the Newton Natural History Society."

In 1879 he had just begun housekeeping at Newton, and here his home remained until last year, when he built a house at Wellesley Hills, a few miles farther out from Boston, on the Boston and Albany Railroad, which he has occupied since November.

He was married August 18, 1869, to Miss Louisa C. Shepard, of Woburn, Mass.

P. O. address Wellesley Hills, Mass.

* JULIUS SANDERSON, the son of Courtlon and Lydia Hunt (Clapp) Sanderson, was born at Phillipston, Mass., September 15, 1846. His preparation for college was made at Phillips Academy, Andover. After graduating at Amherst, he spent a few months with friends in Hudson, N. Y., and early in 1870 he became clerk in the Troy House, Troy, N. Y. This position he held until his failing health convinced him that he needed more out-door work, and in March, 1874, he became travelling agent for E. W. Boughton & Co., dealers in hats and furs in the same city. With them he continued as long as he was able to do any work. The last months of his life were spent at home at Phillipston. His death, which occurred Sunday June 3, 1877, was the result of a bronchial difficulty from which he had long suffered, and which finally ended in consumption. He was never married. Appreciative tributes to the memory of our classmate by Kellogg and Chickering may be found in the Decennial Record of our class.

WILLIAM RUSSELL SCARRITT was born at Alton, Ill., July 14, 1846, and made his preparation for college at St. Louis, Mo., his place of residence at the time of entering college. The first year of his college course was taken at Yale, and he entered our class at the beginning of sophomore year.

After graduation he entered Union Theological Seminary, New York City, where he took the full course of three years. In the spring of 1872 he went abroad, traveling through the principal countries of Europe, and returning in the autumn. Upon his return he took up his residence in St. Louis, and continued his theological studies. Removing to New York, he pursued his studies privately in that city until 1875, when he entered Union Seminary again, and remained there one year as post-graduate. In 1876 he accepted a call to a Presbyterian Church in Olathe, Kan., where he was ordained and installed pastor in April, 1877. Here he remained until 1880, when he resigned and spent the following year in travel and study. In 1881 he became pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Wamego, Kan. He resigned this charge in 1883, and in the autumn of that year went with his family to reside at Amherst, Mass., where he remained for a year and a half, giving his entire time to philosophical studies, preaching frequently upon the Sabbath. In the spring of 1885 he accepted a call to the Congregational Church of Fayette, Iowa, but in February, 1886, changed his field of labor to Marshalltown, a place of 10,000 people in Central Iowa, on the Northwestern R. R., and also on the Iowa Central R. R. This is his home still.

He has made several contributions to the periodical press. A recent article, treating of the "new theology," entitled "The Last Appeal in Theology," which appeared in the December, 1888, number of Our Day has attracted wide-spread attention in theological circles.

The degree of D. D., was conferred upon him in 1880 by Lane University, Kansas.

Dr. Scarritt says that the health of himself and family is good, and that his interest in our Alma Mater suffers no diminution with years, but rather increases.

He was married June 5, 1877, at Olathe, Kan., to Miss Lizzie B. Mariner. They have three children, William R., Jr., born June 23, 1878; Louise Alberta Fuller, born August 17, 1880; and Enid Mariner, born November 28, 1884.

JOSEPH BARTLETT SEABURY was born March 17, 1846, in the city of New Bedford, Mass., and fitted for college under Dr. Taylor, at Phillips Academy, Andover. After graduation two years were spent in teaching, in connection with the High School of Taunton, Mass. Beginning there his preparation for the ministry he took the regular course of three years at Andover Theological Seminary, graduating in June, 1874. The year following was spent mainly in California, and during six months of this time he preached to a small congregation in the vicinity of San Francisco, near the State University at Berkeley.

September 8, 1875, he was ordained, and installed pastor of the John St. Congregational Church of Lowell, Mass., where he remained for nearly seven years until May 2, 1882. In June, 1882, he sailed for Europe, accompanied by Mrs. Seabury. They made the usual summer round of travel, his wife returning home in the autumn. Seabury remained abroad, visiting Rome, Cairo, the Holy Land, Damascus, Constantinople and Athens, reaching this country on his return June 23, 1883, just one year after sailing from New York.

February 4, 1885, he was installed pastor of the First Congregational Church at Dedham, Mass., where he still remains, enjoying "a quiet, but busy pastorate." He writes that he has published nothing beyond several sermons of an anniversary and occasional character, and newspaper articles. The 250th anniversary of his church was observed November 18, 1888, and his sermon preached at that time, with other addresses, have been published in a handsome volume.

Seabury was married September 30, 1874, to Miss Martha Daniels Mason, of Andover, Mass. Two children were reported in 1879, Helena Mason, born February 29, 1876, who died August 15, 1878; and Warren Bartlett, born September 17, 1877. Warren has now three brothers, Joseph Stowe, born November 28, 1879; Mason Hovey, born September 30, 1884; and Mortimer Ashmead, born July 26, 1886.

SIDNEY TUTHILL SKIDMORE was born August 19, 1844, at Wading River, N. Y., and fitted for college at Fort Edward Institute, N. Y. The first year after graduation was spent in Gallipolis, O., as principal of Gallia Academy. Removing to Norwood, N. J., he became principal of a private school, occupying the position for a year. The next three years he was connected with the Moravian school at Bethlehem, Penn., as teacher of natural science. While at Bethlehem he was licensed to preach by the Conference of the Moravian Church, November 20, 1872.

Subsequently he studied for four months at the Stevens Institute, Hoboken, N. J., and then gave instruction for six months in the University of Pennsylvania as assistant professor of physics.

In 1876, he accepted the professorship of physics and astronomy in the Girls' Normal School of Philadelphia, situated at the corner of Spring Garden and Seventeenth Streets. Here he still remains, and has met with great success as an instructor.

Skidmore writes : "Our institution is very large, and my professional life has always been a busy one, but excepting a public lecture occasionally, or a few public addresses, I have done nothing to give me distinction in the public eye."

He is a member of the Wagner Free Institute of Science, and President of the Lehigh Granolithic Company.

Skidmore has been twice married. His first wife was Miss Mary E. Humphrey, of Providence, R. I., to whom he was married December 30, 1877, and who died November 23, 1878, after a brief illness.

He was again married September 10, 1885, to Miss Sadie D. Atkinson, of Philadelphia. They have a daughter, Louisa Binney, born October 10, 1886. P. O. address, 1706 North Eighteenth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WINFIELD SCOTT SLOCUM was born at Grafton, Mass., May 1, 1848, and fitted for college at the high school of his native town. He taught school for three months in the autumn of 1869, at Holden, Mass., and then began the study of law in the office of Slocum & Staples, in the city of Boston. Here he remained, with the exception of three months in the fall of 1870, also spent in teaching, until admitted to the bar, October 28, 1871. Since then he has been practicing law in connection with his father under the firm title of W. F. & W. S. Slocum. Their offices are now at 257 Washington Street, Boston, Mass. For the past twenty years he has been a resident of Newton. In 1874 he was elected as a member of the first school committee of that city, and served for three years. In April 1881 he became City Solicitor of Newton, an office he continues to fill. In 1887 and 1888 he served as a member of the House of Representatives of Massachusetts. Last winter he was defeated for the Speakership of the House by only a few votes, and, if he will consent to remain in public life, a brilliant career lies, no doubt, before him.

He was married at Newtonville, Mass., October 7, 1873, to Miss Annie A. Pulsifer. Of their three children, the first born, Frederic Pulsifer, born October 25, 1874, died November 5, 1874. Two are living, Agnes Elizabeth, born June 6, 1879; and Charles Pulsifer, born September 15, 1885.

HENRY PRESERVED SMITH was born October 23, 1847, at Troy, O., and fitted for college at the High School of Dayton, O., his place of residence at the time of entering Amherst. The three years following graduation were spent at Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati, O. In 1872 he went abroad, and spent two years in travel, and in the study of philosophy and theology at the University of Berlin. In the spring of 1873 he visited Palestine. During the seminary year of 1874-1875 he filled the position of instructor in church history in Lane Theological Seminary, and the following year was instructor in Hebrew at the same institution. He was ordained in June 1875. In 1876 he went abroad the second time, remaining a year, spending a portion of it at Paris, but most of the time (two full semesters) studying Hebrew and the cognate languages at the University of Leipsic. Returning in September, 1877, he accepted the chair of assistant professor of Hebrew in Lane Theological Seminary. In 1879 he was appointed Professor of Hebrew and Old Testament Exegesis in the same institution, which position he still occupies. While he has published no book as yet, many valuable articles from his pen have appeared in the reviews. Among them may be mentioned the following: "In the Presbyterian Review, articles on "Mediæval Jewish Theology," "The Critical Theories of Julius Wellhausen," "The Revised Version and the Old Testament Text." In the Bibliotheca Sacra, on "Ancient Bookmaking." In Hebraica, on "The Text of Jeremiah," "The Targum to Jeremiah," and "The Text of Micah."

Besides these he has written a number of minor notes, criticisms and discussions, generally of Old Testament topics.

From a letter received from Smith we quote: "My life has been an uneventful one. I have a happy home, am located on the grounds of the seminary I serve, convenient to my work, within the city limits (at Walnut Hills), yet enough retired for a student. My course has been marked out for me without special effort on my part. I enjoy study, as everyone does who gets far enough along really to study, and I enjoy teaching, fitting men for usefulness in the noblest of callings. Though I have not published a book as yet, I have put a good deal of time and labor into literary work. Latterly I have devoted my spare time to investigating the state of the Hebrew text of the Old Testament, and if I should get far enough along to publish anything of permanent value, it will be in that line."

Your historian can testify to what a happy and charming home our classmate has in that beautiful suburb of Cincinnati, as it was his privilege to be Prof. Smith's guest for ten days during the sessions of the Presbyterian General Assembly in May, 1885.

In 1887 Smith spent the summer abroad with his family. He has the right now to append D.D. twice to his name, having received the degree from his Alma Mater in 1886, and from Princeton College in 1887.

He was married December 27, 1877 to Miss Anna Macneale, of Cincinnati. They have four children, but the youngest was called away while yet a babe. Their names are Winifred, born April 4, 1879; Preserved, born July 22, 1880; Neale Macneale, born February 28, 1883, and Donald Mayo, born September 5, 1885, died March 14, 1886.

P. O. address, Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati, O.

WINTHROP SMITH was born October 22, 1846, in Cincinnati, O, and prepared for college at Stockbridge, Mass. Since graduation he has been engaged in banking, and is the senior member of the firm of Winthrop and Percy Smith, Bankers, 324 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa. He has been fortunate at different times in rescuing thirteen people from drowning.

His life has been devoted mainly to his business and institutions pertaining to banking, being a director in the Penn National Bank, United Security Life Insurance and Trust Co. and Philadelphia Mortgage and Trust Co. As a private citizen, neither seeking nor accepting political office, he has always taken great interest in the politics of the Republican party, and has contributed his share toward its successes. For ten years he has been a director of the Union League Club of Philadelphia, active in its management and proud of the grand old institution so well known for its war history.

He was married at Arlington, Mass., November 29, 1871, to Miss M. Florence Chapman. Five sons have come to their home, but of these two have been taken away. Their names are W. Brentwood, born March 29, 1873; Edward Chapman, born May 15, 1875 ; Barteau Sargent, born September 19, 1876, died September 25, 1886 ; Harold, born December 29, 1877 ; Hermon Batterson, born October 26, 1879, died December 12, 1879.

EDWIN CHARLES STICKEL was born December 1, 1844, at Lewisberry, Penn. His preparation for college was made in the Preparatory Department of Oberlin College, O. At this institution he took the first part of his college course, entering Amherst Junior year.

For two years after graduation he was principal of the public school of Selma, Ala. In 1871 he entered Andover Theological Seminary, where he took the regular course of three years. The year after graduation at Andover was spent in Talladega, Ala., as instructor in Latin and associate pastor in the college church in Talladega College. He was ordained at Oberlin, O., September 20, 1875. For two years afterward he was pastor of a Congregational church in Montgomery, Ala. His work at the South was under the auspices of the American Missionary Association. December 1, 1877, he became acting pastor of a Congregational church at Mazo Manie, Wis., and two years later at Boscobel, Wis. After these four years he was obliged to close his work in Wisconsin on account of trouble with his eyes. A year was spent in Ohio in business life for the sake of rest and change, when he was called again to the work in the South as treasurer, instructor and preacher in Tougaloo University, Miss. Two years were spent there, when in 1884 he was transferred by the American Missionary Association to the larger and more responsible position of treasurer and business manager of Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn. He writes that he is occupied with the work involved in such a position with the added work of preaching and lecturing in turn with other members of the Faculty to the University church.

Stickel has been married twice. His first wife, Miss Anna W. Spencer, to whom he was married August 1, 1870, died during the following year at Selma, Ala. He was married again August 2, 1874, to Miss Luretta R. Chamberlin, at Oberlin, O. They have one child, Alma Luretta, born August 15, 1877.

FRANCIS HOVEY STODDARD was born April 25, 1847, at Middlebury, Vt., and fitted for college under the instruction of Prof. Josiah Clark of Northampton, Mass. After graduation he taught for two years in a private school in Westchester, N. Y., then engaged in business, for a time in New York City, but in 1873 became a cotton manufacturer at Northampton. He was married May 14, 1873, to Miss Lucy M. Smith, of Springfield, Mass.; he has one child, Lucy, born August 15, 1874.

The above statements, condensed from the first edition of this chronicle, are still true, despite the lapse of years. For a few years more Stoddard continued to give his attention mainly to business, but engaged also in literary work as he had leisure, contributing papers to The New Englander and to other Reviews. One of these papers, on "The Modern Novel," published in September, 1883, was very widely noticed. In 1884 Stoddard sold his manufacturing interests and sailed for England with his family, proposing to devote his whole time to literary pursuits. For two years he remained abroad, studying English literature, mainly at the University of Oxford, spending also one half-year in Germany. In the autumn of 1886 he was called to the University of California to take the position of instructor in English Literature. In 1888 he was called to the University of the City of New York to take a newly endowed chair under the title of

Professor of the English Language and Literature. It may be stated here that he was chosen for this professorship out of seven others who had been recommended to the Board of Directors.

Since 1884 Stoddard has been a frequent contributor to the literary reviews, one of his later articles being on "Tolstoi and Matthew Arnold," in the Andover Review for October, 1888. He has also published a work on the "Mysteries and Miracle Plays of the Middle Ages," a second edition of which will soon be issued, and is engaged at the present time upon several works of like character.

P. O. address, University of the City of New York, N. Y. City. Stoddard expects to spend the summer of 1889 in England.

ALBERT FRANCIS TENNEY was born July 24, 1847, at South Braintree, Mass., and fitted for college at the High School in Salem, Mass. For the first year after graduation he was at the head of the classical department in an Episcopal academy in Philadelphia. In the autumn of 1870 he began the study of theology at Union Theological Seminary, New York City, where he remained for two years. During the school year of 1872 and 1873, he was principal of the Boys' High School, Wilmington, Del. From 1873 to 1882 he was an instructor in St. John's School, Sing Sing, N. Y. After passing the examinations required in the Protestant Episcopal Church, he was ordained to the Diaconate, June 4, 1882, and was immediately elected rector of All Saints' church at Briar Cliff, near Sing Sing.

October 1, 1884, he became rector of Grace Church, Madison, N. J., which position he resigned April 2, 1888. After taking charge of St. Philip's Church in Philadelphia from April 29 to August 1, and serving in various other parishes during the summer and fall of that year, he became assistant minister of St. Ann's-on-the-Heights, in the city of Brooklyn, N. Y., where he is now serving.

He was married August 16, 1876, to Miss Elizabeth Russell Wallace, of Philadelphia, Pa., but we grieve to record her death, which occurred last year, March 31, 1888. He has two children, Albert Francis, Jr., born July 15, 1878, and Laura Wallace, born July 5, 1880.

DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON was born at Montpelier, Vt., February 9, 1850, and his preparation for college was made in the Washington County Grammar School of his native place. In the autumn of 1869 he served his last term as Assistant Secretary of the State of Vermont, after which he removed to New York City, where he gave private instruction, and studied law with G. R. Thompson, Esq., his brother. In April, 1870, he accepted a position as teacher of classics in the Springfield, Mass., High School, where he remained until the summer of 1872. In July of this year he published, from the press of S. C. Griggs & Co., an elementary work, "A First Book in Latin," which met with very favorable notice all over the country. In the autumn of 1872 he resumed the study of law in New York City ; was admitted to the bar December 13 of that year, and has been in practice ever since. For nearly four years he was a law partner of T. L. Stiles (class of 1871), in the firm of Jordan, Stiles & Thompson.

After this he formed a copartnership with Simon Sterne and Oscar S. Straus, late United States Minister to Turkey, under the firm name of Sterne, Straus & Thompson ; and subsequently, on the retirement of Mr. Straus, under the firm name of Sterne & Thompson. In 1886 he formed a new connection, which at present continues at No. 35 Wall Street, under the firm name of Thompson, Ackley & Kaufman. During all periods since his graduation he has been engaged in systematic literary work.

It was his intention to follow up his "First Book in Latin" with a series of Latin works, but his change of occupation prevented. In April, 1871, a paper of his on "Oratory and Vocal Culture," appeared in the Massachusetts Teacher, of Boston.

In the summer of 1876 he published three articles in the Liberal Christian on "Collyer and Orthodoxy," "Skepticism and Criticism," and "The Universality of Christianity and the Church;" also a sequel to these in the Fitchburg (Mass.) Sentinel on "The True Basis of Church Fellowship."

He also has been a frequent contributor to Mind, a quarterly review of psychology and philosophy, published in London; to the Popular Science Monthly, published in New York, and to various other journals and reviews. In 1884 he published through the house of Longmans & Co., in London, "A System of Psychology," in two volumes, 8vo. of 600 pages each. This was followed in 1886 by "The Problem of Evil," a continuation of his psychological work into the field of Ethics.

In 1888 appeared the "Religious Sentiments of the Human Mind," and in 1889 another volume entitled "Social Progress." He has other works in process of completion. He has never held political office in New York City, although he has been identified with various political movements, notably those relating to Civil Service, Revenue, and High License reform. He is at present a Vice-President of the New York Alumni Association of Amherst College. Upon the death of Courtlandt Palmer, Esq., he was elected to the presidency of the 19th Century Club, which position he still holds. His residence is No. 222 West Twenty-Third Street, New York City.

March 31, 1881 he married Henrietta Gallup, of Cleveland, Ohio, but has no children.

ALFRED EDWARDS TRACY was born July 2, 1845, at West Brookfield, Mass., and fitted for college at the Plattsville and Lancaster academies, Wisconsin. In the autumn of 1869 he entered Chicago Theological Seminary. During the summer vacation, from May until September, 1870, he was engaged in home mission work in Missouri, with headquarters at Springfield, preaching mostly in Lebanon and Marshfield, and organizing a church in the latter place. The second and third year of his theological course were taken at Andover Seminary, where he graduated June, 1872. It was his intention to go abroad as a foreign missionary, but, prevented by the illness of his wife, he accepted a call to the Congregational church of Harvard, Mass., where he was ordained and installed September 4, 1872. Here he remained until June, 1874, when he was compelled, on account of the state of Mrs. Tracy's health, to resign, and spent the summer at Clifton Springs, N. Y. In December, 1874, he accepted a call to become pastor of a Congregational church at Oconomowoc, Waukesha County, Wis., a favorite summer resort for the people of Chicago and St. Louis. Here he remained until November 1, 1878, when he accepted an invitation to supply the Congregational church of North Springfield, Mo., for six months.

While at Harvard, Mass., he served as Chairman of the Board of Education, and at Oconomowoc as Superintendent of the city schools. In June 1879 he returned East, and in August accepted a call to Wilton, N. H. Here he remained until May 1885, when he removed to Foxboro', Mass., and became pastor of the Congregational Church. In the autumn of 1886 he was a delegate to the National Council of Congregational Churches, held in Chicago. In 1888 the condition of the health of his family, and the advice of physicians turned his thought toward California. Receiving a call to Ontario, Cal., he resigned, and in October left for the Pacific Coast.

He is now at Ontario, forty miles south of Los Angeles, and has charge of a small church, which is growing rapidly, having more than doubled its members since he went there. The prospects of the place are very fine, and his account of the oranges, etc., growing there is certainly most tantalizing. Tracy is not sure that he wants to make California his home, but for the present finds it very pleasant.

He was married at Bennington, Vt., July 2, 1872, to Miss Kate S. Harwood, of Springfield, Mass. Of their four children, the eldest, Bertha, born July 10, 1873, died November 2, 1874. There are living, Ira Edwards, born June 6, 1878; Addie Eliza, born July 21, 1881; and Harwood, born November 22, 1883.

ELIHU HILLES VOTAW was born June 21,

1836, at New Garden, Columbiana County, Ohio. His preparation for college was made at Wheaton College, Ill., and by private instruction, at Amherst, under Prof. C. H. Parkhurst, now of New York City.

From the time of graduation until May 31, 1870, he was engaged in a wholesale lamp business in Springfield, Mass., and New York City. From September 1, 1870, he taught in the Union Free School of Yonkers, N. Y., for two years. Removing to Cleveland, O., he taught in that city from September 1, 1872, until April 17, 1874. May 1, 1874, he commenced preaching in the Congregational church of Rockport, O. August 28 of that year he was ordained in the Euclid Avenue Church, Cleveland, and the following month began preaching at Brooklyn, O., where he removed March 5, 1875, and where he was installed pastor June 9, 1876.

July 1, 1877, he left this charge, and entered upon the pastorate of the Congregational church of Berea, O., where he labored until August, 1881. After a sojourn of a few months at Manhattan, Kan., he removed to St. Paul, Minn., and founded the Atlantic Congregational Church of that city, where he labored until October 1, 1885, when he removed to Ohio again, and entered upon the pastorate of the First Congregational Church, Geneva, Ohio, where he now resides. His only published works are a sermon on "The Pillars and Perils of the Republic," Geneva, Ohio, November, 1888; and a popular lecture entitled "Dreams and Day-Dreamers," Geneva, 1889. This lecture has made him one of the most popular platform speakers in Ohio.

Votaw was married September 1, 1859, at Liber, Ind., to Miss Hattie Adelaide Webber. They have seven children: Mary Theresa, born August 18, 1861; Clyde Webber, born February 6, 1864; Martha Eucola, born June 8, 1866; Eldon Merriam, born October 16, 1868; Myrtle Enida, born July 25, 1871; Harriet Lyravine, born December 28, 1874; and Emeline Ruth, born April 19, 1879. Their eldest daughter was married August 22, 1888, to Prof. A. W. Brett, of Eureka, Kan. Their eldest son graduated last year from Amherst. Gentlemen of '69, we are growing old.

* WILLIAM HILTON WARN, the son of Richard Hilton and Margaret (Gray) Warn, was born at Martin, Mich., April 25, 1845, and was prepared for college at the Union High School, Ann Arbor, Mich. After spending two years in Michigan University, he entered our class in the autumn of 1866. The two years following his graduation were spent in the study of medicine, one at the Medical Department of Michigan University, the other in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York City, where he received the degree of M.D. in 1871. After practicing for a year in Lowell, Mass., and devoting another year to farther study in the General Hospital at Vienna, Austria, he established himself in December, 1873, in Chicago, Ill. Failing health compelled the seeking of a different climate, and after spending a winter in Florida, he removed to Denver, Col., where he remained till his death from consumption, January 7, 1882. Besides holding important positions in several medical societies, Dr. Warn was, at the time of his death, Professor of Gynecology in the recently established Medical College at Denver, and editor and publisher of the Colorado Medical Journal, the first number of which appeared just before his death.

He was never married.

ROBERT MCEWEN WOODS was born January 24, 1847, at Enfield, Mass. His preparation for college was made at the Highland Military Academy, in Worcester, Mass., where he studied three years, and was completed by a year's subsequent study under the instruction of Professor Josiah Clark, of Northampton. In the autumn of 1869 he began the study of theology, spending the first year at the Union Seminary, New York City, and the second year at Andover, Mass. In 1871 he accepted the position of instructor in English at Amherst College, and occupied this position until he went abroad in July, 1873. He was absent from this country fifteen months, visiting the principal countries of Europe, and making a tour through Egypt and Palestine. During the winter of 1874 and 1875, he attended lectures in theology at the Yale Divinity School, and from May 1875 until November, 1876, was at his home in Enfield.

The year following he supplied the Congregational church at Hatfield, Mass., and was ordained and installed pastor of the church November 21, 1877. Here he still resides. But his record at the end of twenty years ends very differently from that given ten years ago. Let him tell his own story: "I was so chagrined at the statement that I was not married, made in the closing sentence of the notice which was given me in the Decennial Report, that I took immediate steps to get a wife. On October 29, 1879, I was married at Haverhill, Mass., to Anna Fairbank, daughter of the Rev. S. B. Fairbank, D.D., of Ahmednagar, India, and a graduate of the class of 1879 of Mt. Holyoke Seminary."

The class will be interested to know that "Bob" has to call Will Ballantine "uncle" now, as Mrs. Woods is a niece of the latter. Before attempting a list of the children, for fear space may fail, let it be stated that our classmate has been for many years a Trustee of Smith College, and that he occupies at Hatfield the house built by Sophia Smith, the founder of the college. In 1882 he was chosen one of the Overseers of the Charitable Fund at Amherst. This gives him the privilege of going in to the Alumni dinner along with the dignitaries, as we learned in 1884. In 1886 he was travelling in Europe during July and August.

Now for the children, Josiah Bridges, born October 16, 1882, (he is the cup-boy of the class of 1879, of Mt. Holyoke Seminary); Alan Fairbank, born February 3, 1884; Katharine, born October 29, 1885; Charlotte, born July 8, 1887, and Margaret, born March 18, 1889. A young forest !

BIOGRAPHICAL RECORD OF NON-GRADUATE MEMBERS OF THE CLASS.

HENRY ADAMS was born October 31, 1845, at Middlebury, Vt., and fitted for college at Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Mass. After leaving college, in Junior year, he taught for one winter, and then, for nine months in 1868 and 1869, was clerk in a drug store in Brooklyn, N. Y. The two years following he spent in Washington, D. C., as apothecary in the Naval Hospital. Removing to Mount Vernon, N. Y., in 1871, he engaged in the drug business, remaining there a year and a half. Returning to Washington, he was appointed to a clerkship in the Post-Office Department, which he held for three years. While there he received the degree of "Doctor of Pharmacy" at the National College of Pharmacy. In 1876 he engaged in the drug business in Amherst, Mass., where he still resides. He is an Honorary Director of the Massachusetts Masonic Mutual Relief Association.

He was married September 23, 1873, at Waterbury, Conn., to Miss Miranda S. Morgan. They have three children, Charles B., born June 30, 1874 ; Mary E., born December 6, 1880, and Henry, born June 5, 1883.

Since leaving college in the autumn of 1867, he has been engaged in business in Boston. In 1879 he was with F. Barnard, 35 Congress Street. Since 1880 he has been with the firm of Webster & Co., 55 High Street, extensive tanners and curriers of leather, holding the position of confidential and corresponding clerk. The position is one of much responsibility, as the firm is in direct communication with all parts of the world, and the salary is commensurate with the responsibility, so that Bacon writes, "financially I am doing very well."

He was married May 26, 1875, to Mrs. Almeda Francis Stone (née Miller), at Boston. They reside at North Cambridge.

P. O. Address, Box 2,138, Boston, Mass.

ALDEN EDWARD BESSEY was born at Hebron, Me., January 1, 1838. He fitted for college at Hebron Academy, and at the Maine Wesleyan Seminary. He was a member of our class during Sophomore and a part of Junior years. After leaving Amherst he studied medicine and received the degree of M.D. from the Maine Medical School, connected with Bowdoin College, in June, 1870. After practicing in Wayne, Me., six months, he settled in Sidney, Me., and has there devoted himself entirely to his profession. During eighteen years neither vacations nor sickness have taken him from active professional work more than four weeks. He expects to close his business in Sidney during the summer of 1889, and, after spending a few months visiting the leading hospitals in the United States, resume his profession in Waterville, Maine.

He married Miss Helen J. Morton, of Paris, Me., May 4, 1863. They had two children, Merton W., born October 31, 1868; and Earle E., born January 19, 1871. His wife died June 10, 1873. He was married again to Miss Clara A. Forbes, of Paris, Me., May 28, 1874. They have a daughter, Leonora, born June 11, 1876. P. O. Address, Centre Sidney, Me.

* JOHN RANDOLPH BROWN, son of Marcus B. and Cynthia A. Brown, was born at Orient, Suffolk Co., N. Y., November 8, 1846. His preparation for college was made at Amenia, N. Y. He left Amherst at the end of Junior year on account of illness. He remained at his home on Long Island for a time, but growing worse went to Danville, N. Y., for treatment. Here he died August 12, 1868.

* HENRY REED CHITTENDEN, son of Nelson H. Chittenden, was born January 23, 1842, at Genesee, Mich. He prepared for college at Oberlin, O., where he passed also the first two years of his college course. He entered Amherst in the autumn of 1867, and was a member of our class during Junior year. Returning to Oberlin Senior year, he graduated there August 4, 1869. For a year he remained at Oberlin, studying theology, and then accepted the principalship of the preparatory department of Berea College, Berea, Ky. This position he held for six years, thoroughly organizing the school, which received pupils of both sexes and without distinction of race. During this time he was also engaged to a considerable extent in mission and Sunday-school work among the mountains of Kentucky. In July, 1876, he accepted the position of Superintendent of the Public Schools of Oberlin, O. He filled this office until December 5, 1878, when failing health compelled him to resign and seek the more favorable climate of California. He spent the winter with a brother among the sheep ranges of the Coast Range mountains. We last heard from him in March, 1879, when he wrote expressing the hope that with the approach of the dry, warm season, his throat and lung trouble would be relieved.

But this was not to be. We did not know it at our reunion in 1879, but our former classmate had even then gone to his rest. His death occurred at Cahto, Mendocino Co., Cal, June 24, 1879.

He was married August 4, 1869, to Miss Ella C. Chamberlin, of Oberlin, O. He left two children, Caroline E., born August 20, 1870, and Mary C., born March 18, 1874.

JOHN BATES CLARK was born at Providence, R. I., January 26, 1847, and fitted for college at the High School of his native city. He entered the Class of 1869 at Brown University and remained through Sophomore year. He came to Amherst in 1867 and was a member of our class during Junior year. In 1868 he accompanied his invalid father to Minnesota and resided in Minneapolis till September, 1870. He entered the Class of 1871 at Amherst at the beginning of Senior year, but remained only one term, as he was called West again by the more serious illness of his father. After his father's death, which occurred in 1871, he returned to Amherst and graduated with the class of 1872. Two and a half years were then spent in European travel and study, remaining through four semesters at Heidelberg, and taking a short course also at Zurich. In September, 1875, he accepted a call to Carleton College at Northfield, Minn., taking temporary charge of the President's classes and teaching Political Economy and History. An attack of typhoid fever that same autumn disabled him so completely that he was able to do little work for two years, filling a vacancy for two terms in the Minnesota State University. In 1877 he returned to Carleton College, and filled the professorship of Political Economy and History there for four years. He was then elected to a similar professorship in Smith College, Northampton, Mass., a position he still occupies.

A series of articles, which he published in

The New Englander, was afterward embodied with other matter in a book called "The Philosophy of Wealth." Another book, entitled "The Modern Distributive Process," has been issued, made up of articles which he published in The Political Science Quarterly, in combination with articles by F. H. Giddings. A monograph on "Capital and its Earnings," and a fractional monograph on "Wages," are also worthy of mention. He has also written many smaller articles and detached chapters of books.

He was married September 28, 1875, at Minneapolis, Minn., to Miss Myra A. Smith. They have three sons, Frederick Huntington, born April 13, 1877; Alden Hyde, born June 26, 1878, and John Maurice, born November 30, 1884. Residence, 23 Round Hill, Northampton, Mass.

HENRY ADOLPHUS DAVENPORT was born in North Stamford, Conn., March 26, 1845, and his preparation for college was made at Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Mass., where he graduated as salutatorian of his class. He was a member of our class at Amherst during Freshman and a part of Sophomore years, and was then obliged to omit a year on account of the condition of his health. During a portion of this time he taught at Branford, Conn. He then resumed his course in 1867 with the class of 1870, remaining until 1869. In October of that year he entered Union Theological Seminary, New York City, and continued his studies in that institution for four years, graduating May, 1873. This same year he received the degree of A. B. from Amherst College. He was ordained June 18, 1873, by the Fairfield West Consociation of Congregational Churches. From June, 1873, until February, 1878, he resided in New York City, having charge of the Alexander Mission Chapel on King Street, connected with the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, of which Dr. John Hall is pastor. Since February, 1878, he has been pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Bridgeport, Conn. This pastorate has been an eminently successful one, and the present tokens of prosperity are abundant. There has been marked growth in every direction. June 5, 1889, an elegant and unique Sunday-School building, joining the church, built of stone, and semi-circular in form, was dedicated. The building cost $40,000, and for adaptation to its purpose is without a superior in the country. A new stone manse is now in contemplation. Your historian has been associated with Davenport for eleven years in the Presbytery of Westchester, and can bear personal testimony to the extent and value of the work he has been permitted to do, and to his steadily growing power as pastor and preacher.

Davenport was married September 29, 1874, to Miss Lizzie M. Enright, of New York City. Of their four children, Henry, born May 7, 1876; William E., born October 11, 1877, and Maria O., born January 11, 1879, are living. The youngest, Lizzie C., born October 16, 1881, died at the age of one month.

Residence, 296 State Street, Bridgeport, Conn.

WILLIAM ALDRICH DUDLEY was born at Providence, R. I., December 7, 1847, and fitted for college in the High School of his native city. The beginning of his college course was spent at Brown University. In the fall of Junior year he entered the class of 1869, at Amherst, but, obliged by the state of his health to omit a year, he graduated with the class of 1870. After graduation he engaged in the wholesale dry goods business in Providence, remaining there until 1886, when he removed to Marlboro, Mass., where he now resides. He is the senior member of the firm of William A. Dudley & Co., proprietors of the Boston Dry Goods' Store.

He was married November 19, 1872, to Miss Jennie L. Church, of Providence. They have six children: Charles Eaton, born August 30, 1873; Annie Josephine, born Feb. 6, 1875; William Clark, born July 12, 1876; Frank Church, born August 29, 1877; Walter Wilmarth, born March 24, 1885; and Henry Augustus, born October 21, 1886.

JEWETT CASTELLO GILSON was born at Rockingham, Vt., May 23, 1844, and at the time of entering college was a resident of Cambridgeport, Vt. He entered Amherst in 1865, and was a member of our class until the second term of Sophomore year. Since leaving college he has been engaged almost constantly in educational work. For two years he was Principal of the Allegany Institute, at Almond, N. Y. In 1869 he went to California, where he has since resided, and has gained for himself the reputation of being one of the best qualified and ablest educators on the Pacific Coast. For eight years he taught in the public schools of Alameda County, and then was then elected Superintendent of Schools for that county, a position he filled for four years. In 1882 he was elected Superintendent of Schools for Oakland City, and held the office for four years. A year was spent in the study of medicine in San Francisco, and since then he has been conducting a private school.

January 9, 1888, he opened a "Normal and Special Training School," in San Francisco, and in the near future proposes to permanently establish, either in that city or in Oakland, a "Normal Institute and School of Culture." He has also done a valuable work as Conductor of County Institutes through the State.

Gilson was married July 27, 1872, at Ogden, Utah, to Miss Carrie T. Greene, of Plainfield, N. J. They have three children, Ray Edson, born June 19, 1873; Cass Lord, born January 31, 1877; and Rosse Mozart, born April 6, 1883.

Address, Hamilton Hall, Oakland, Cal.

DON GLEASON HILL was born July 12, 1847, at Medway, Mass., and fitted for college at the Wesleyan Academy, Wilbraham, Mass. Leaving college just before the close of Sophomore year, he devoted himself to preparation for the legal profession. For a time he worked at his trade of carpenter, studying evenings. During the winter of 1868-1869 he taught in the Academy at Barre, Vt. Entering the law school at Albany, N. Y., he received the degree of LL.B. from that institution May 10, 1870, and was admitted to the bar of New York the following month. Returning to his native place, he entered, as a student, the law office of Charles H. Deans, Esq. Here he remained until June, 1871, when, removing to Dedham, the shire town of Norfolk County, he entered the office of the Hon. Waldo Colburn. He was admitted to the bar of Massachusetts, September 25, 1871, but remained in the same office, as assistant, until June 1875, when Mr. Colburn was appointed, by Governor Gaston, a Judge of the Superior Court. Hill was left in possession of his office, and retained a large portion of his practice. In October, a law partnership, under the firm title of Hill & Mackintosh was formed with Mr. Charles A. Mackintosh, which continued for several years, and was then dissolved. Hill's practice for the past ten years has been chiefly in real estate and probate law, extending throughout the county. He is the attorney for several Savings Banks. For several years he has held the office of Selectman, Assessor, and Overseer of the Poor, and for ten years has been Town Clerk of the ancient town of Dedham, which has just celebrated its 250th anniversary, both of town and church.

Years of labor in searching old records has developed an antiquarian taste. He is a member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society of Boston, and is the President of the Dedham Historical Society. When the County Commissioners decided to transcribe the records in the ancient towns of the County, Hill was chosen to superintend the work. He has edited two volumes, which the town has published. The first volume was issued in 1886, and is "The Record of Births, Marriages and Deaths, etc., in Dedham." It covers the period from 1635 to 1845. The second volume, which appeared in 1888, is a memorial volume, giving the Record of Baptisms, Marriages, Deaths, Admissions to the Churches, and Dismissions therefrom, transcribed from the Church Records in Dedham 1635 to 1845, with the Epitaphs in the ancient burial place. Of these works the N. Y. Independent says: "Mr. Hill has done his work with that enthusiastic attention to details and accuracy on which such works depend for their value. It is a collection to provoke enthusiasm, one of the most valuable publications of its kind we have ever seen."

Hill was married December 26, 1876, to Miss Carrie Louisa Luce, of Dedham, Mass. They have five children, Carrie Frances, born September 27, 1877; Helen Florence, born January 20, 1880; Don Gleason, Jr., born August 26, 1883; Maria Louisa, born January 11, 1885; and Alice Laura, born September 18, 1888. Mr. and Mrs. Hill are members of the church of which our classmate Seabury is pastor.

* ISAAC HENRY HOBBS, son of Charles W. and Lydia L. Hobbs, was born August 9, 1849, in the town of Berwick, Me., and fitted for college at the South Berwick Academy. On account of illness he left our class at the beginning of Sophomore year, and never regained his health. He was better for a time and went to Exeter in order to prepare to resume his college course. But his health would not permit continued study, and he returned home, where he remained until his death, which occurred July 8, 1870.

HENRY CORRELL HUMPHREY was born at East Windsor, Conn., June 10, 1848, and prepared for college at Stamford, Conn. He was a member of our class during Freshman year. In 1866 he went to Europe and the following year returned to Amherst, where he remained for one year as a member of the class of 1870. He then entered the Sheffield Scientific School at New Haven, where he graduated in 1870, receiving the degree of Ph.B. After graduation, two years were spent in Europe, mainly at the University of Berlin, in the study of chemistry. In 1872 he became connected with a sugar refinery in Philadelphia as chemist, and in 1874 established a laboratory, and continued in that city until 1878, when he removed to New York City, making his home for several years in Stamford. At present he is engaged in the real estate business, with an office at 177 Broadway, New York City, and residing in Brooklyn.

He was married in 1870 to Miss Florence Thurston, of Stamford, Conn. A daughter, Mary, was born in 1871, while they were residing in Europe, in the city of Dresden.

JOHN BOYD JOHNSTON was born April 4, 1848, in Hillsborough, O., and fitted for college in the public schools of his native place. He entered Amherst Sophomore year, but remained only one term and graduated from Miami University, Oxford, O., in 1868. After studying law for a time, he entered Lane

Theological Seminary, where he remained one year. The following vacation was spent in the real estate business in Illinois, where he laid out the town of Montrose, now a flourishing little village, on the Vandalia Railroad, between Indianapolis and St. Louis. The winter of 1871 and 1872 was spent at Union Theological Seminary, New York City. He was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Chillicothe, in the spring of 1873, and December 26 of the same year was ordained and installed pastor of the Presbyterian churches of Hamden and McArthur, O., where he remained until 1875. Then for a time he was without charge, and was looking after landed interests at Montrose, Ill. In 1877 he was dismissed to the Southern Association of Congregational Churches of Illinois, and after a short pastorate at Edgewood, February 11, 1878, he became pastor of the Congregational Church of Hillsborough, Ill. While there he entered the lecture field, delivering a number of lectures at different points on "Edison and his Inventions." Here he remained until 1881, when, after a few months' residence upon his farm at Montrose, he took charge of the Congregational Churches at Thawville and Roberts, Ill. In 1883 he became pastor of the Storrs Congregational Church in Cincinnati, O., where he remained for three years. In 1887, after doing City Missionary work in Cincinnati, he went to Mine La Motte, Mo., where he organized a Congregational Church. In April, 1888, he removed to St. Louis and accepted the pastorate of the Olive Branch Congregational Church of that city, a position he still holds. In 1887 he received the degree of M. A. from Miami University.

Johnston was married April 22, 1872, at Vandalia, Ill., to Miss Nancy E. Wigal. They have three children: John Boyd, Jr., born May 10, 1874; Anna Maria, born January 24, 1876; and James William, born April 22, 1879.

P. O. address, 2134 Victor Street, St. Louis, Mo.

THOMAS HENRY MCGRAW was born at Dryden, N. Y., July 17, 1846, and prepared for college in his native place. He was a member of our class for two years, and then left to engage in the extensive lumber business of his uncle, John McGraw, of Ithaca, N. Y. For the first three years, from 1867 to 1870, he was with another uncle, Thomas McGraw, who had charge of a branch of the business in Albany. Upon the death of this uncle, he was in 1870 placed in charge of the mills at Portsmouth, Mich., where he remained for nearly ten years, at the head of one of largest lumber manufacturing mills in the country. In 1877, after the death of his uncle, John McGraw, he succeeded to his interests in the firm, and in 1880 removed to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he still resides.

In 1881 he received the degree of A.M. from Amherst, and in 1884 was made a Trustee of the College.

McGraw was married, July 27, 1886, at Philadelphia, Pa., to Miss Pauline T. Uberhurst. Of their five children, two have died, Louis J., born July 2, 1880, died October 18, 1880; and Pauline F., born October 10, 1882, died June 22, 1888. Three are living, Thomas H. Jr., born September 18, 1877; Frank U., born February 8, 1879; and Grace, born June 16, 1887.

* LEWIS MEACHAM, son of the Rev. James and Mrs. Mary F. Meacham, was born at New Haven, Vt., March 8, 1846. His preparations for college was begun at Farmington, Conn., where he remained one year, and completed at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass. He was a member of our class during a part of Junior year. After leaving Amherst, he was tutor for a few months in Christian College, Indiana. But his inclination leading him strongly to journalism, he went to Chicago, where he obtained a position upon the Tribune, which he filled until after the great fire. He was then appointed by Mayor Medill as private secretary. In 1874, he returned to Vermont, and became local editor of the Rutland Herald, but the following year went again to Chicago, to accept a position upon the editorial staff of the Tribune. This position he occupied until his death, October 2, 1878. While his death was sudden, it was not unexpected, as he had long suffered from a wound received in the army, and from ill health contracted during the war. While busy at work one morning he was taken sick, and suffered intensely until the next morning, when he died.

* JOSEPH CHAPMAN BLANCHARD MILLER, son of Dr. Seth P. and Mrs. Elizabeth C. B. Miller, was born at Worcester, Mass., March 11, 1848. His preparatory studies were pursued at the Worcester High School, and he entered Amherst College, September, 1865.

Attacked with typhoid fever near the close of the first term of Sophomore year, he died after an illness of three weeks at his home in Worcester, December 11, 1866. A scholarship fund of $1,000 was established in memory of our lamented classmate by his mother.

* HENRY TYLER MORSE was born at Westminster, Vt., April 5, 1844. After attending school at the academies in Westminster and Saxton's River, Vt., and in Bernardston, Mass., he completed his preparatory course at the Kimball Union Academy, Meriden, N. H. Entering Amherst in 1865, he was a member of our class until the end of the first term of Junior year, when failing health compelled him to leave college. For a time he filled the office of Superintendent of Schools in his native town, but in 1869 resigned and went to Minnesota for his health. He remained a year, returning home July 11, 1870. It was now evident that consumption was doing its fatal work and from this time he failed rapidly until his death, which occurred September 18, 1870.

GEORGE ALBERT PIKE was born in Newburyport, Mass., August 24, 1848, and prepared for college at the Newburyport High School. His name was enrolled as a member of our class in the fall of 1865, but he was with us but a very short time. He is a physician, and resides at Bristol, R. I.

* GEORGE WASHINGTON SEAVER, son of Joseph and Abigail Eveline (Parker) Seaver, was born at Pomfret, Vt.; June 1, 1846, and fitted for college at the Kimball Union Academy, Meriden, N. H. He was a member of our class during Freshman year, and was then compelled by a disease of the eyes to leave college for a time. During his absence he taught school at Cavendish, Vt., and at Chester, Mass. Returning to college in 1867 he graduated with the class of 1870. After graduation he became an agent for a publishing house in New York City. In its employ he sailed for Galveston, Tex., in the steamer "Varuna," which foundered at sea off the coast of Florida, on the night of the 20th of October, 1870, and he was among the lost.

* WILLIAM CAMPBELL STOKES, son of Jordan Stokes, was born at Lebanon, Tenn., May 16, 1847. He entered Amherst in 1863 with the class of 1867, and after absence on account of ill health, resumed his college course with our class during Sophomore year, remaining only two terms. He died February 2, 1869.

HENRY PITT WARREN was born at Windham, Me., March 20, 1846, and fitted for college at Gorham Academy, Me., and at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass. Leaving college at the end of Freshman year, he went to Yale, where he graduated June, 1870. After graduation, he was master of a grammar school in New Bedford, Mass., until January, 1872, when he became principal of the High School of Dover, N. H., filling that position until July, 1875. In the fall of that year he began the study of theology, at Bangor Seminary, as a special student. His health failing, he went South, where he remained until the summer of 1877. Returning to Dover, he was made superintendent of schools there, which position he occupied until he resigned, in February, 1879, to accept the principalship of the State Normal School at Plymouth, N. H. In 1883 he was elected English Master in the Lawrenceville School, Lawrenceville, N. J. After filling this position for three years he was called in 1886 to the Head Mastership of the Albany Academy, Albany, N. Y. He writes that his health is re-established and that he is heartily enjoying his work.

Warren was married in August, 1879, to Miss Annie L. Lyman, of Exeter, N. H. They have three children, Constance, born November 5, 1880 ; William, born August 18, 1882 ; and Dorothy L., born January 29, 1888.

P. O. address, Albany, N. Y.

LUCIAN ETHALSTON WELLS was born at Athens, Vt., July 28, 1844, and fitted for college at Leland and Grey Seminary, Townshend, Vt. He was a member of our class during Freshman year. In 1873 he received the degree of A.M. from Amherst College. After leaving college he studied medicine, received the degree of M.D., and practiced his profession in Michigan and Rhode Island. His last address, so far as can be ascertained, was Brattleboro, Vt. It has been impossible to learn anything farther about him. He was married, January 2, 1881, to Miss Mary F. Webb, of Charlotte, Vt. For these facts we are indebted to the "Biographical Record of the Alumni and Non-Graduates of Amherst College," edited by Prof. Montague, and published in 1883.

HARRY WILLIAMS was born at Lebanon, O. June 12, 1846, and fitted for college at Hamilton, O., his place of residence at the time he entered Amherst. After leaving college at the end of Sophomore year, he spent one year in the Internal Revenue Collector's office at Charleston, W. Va. In July, 1868, he removed to Toledo, O., and engaged in the manufacture of chairs, a business which he still prosecutes under the firm name of Williams & Co., proprietors of the Toledo Chair Factory. But let him speak for himself: "I am still in Toledo, still making chairs, in which occupation I have been modestly successful, still warm in my affection for the boys, and still, at the mature age of forty-three, a forlorn and disconsolate old bachelor; and I have little doubt that when the grim reaper finally fastens his grip upon me, I shall be found in this same unhappy condition."

P.O. address, 342 Huron Street, Toledo, O.

WALLACE WINOT WILLIAMSON was born December 5, 1845, at Malone, N. Y., and prepared for college in his native place. He entered Amherst in 1865, and was a member of our class until Junior year. After leaving college he studied dentistry in Malone, and subsequently practiced with Dr. Nichols, at Potsdam, N. Y. In 1872 he removed to Oswego, N. Y., where he soon built up a large practice. In the autumn of 1878 he attended lectures at the Pennsylvania Dental College in Philadelphia. In 1880 he went to Syracuse, N. Y., desiring to establish himself in a larger city. Two years ago he attended the Tooth Crown College in New York City, which makes a specialty of crown and bridge work. The introduction of this branch of dentistry into his practice has more than doubled his business, rendering it first-class in every respect. He contemplates spending a three months' vacation in Europe the coming summer.

But in all his practice he has never yet pulled a tooth for his wife. Williamson is a bachelor.

CLASS RE-UNIONS.

I.—Thursday evening, July 13th, 1871, at Hayne's Hotel, Springfield, Mass. Thirty-one of the class were present. This took the place of a triennial meeting, in view of the celebration that year of the semi-centennial of the college.

II.—Wednesday evening, July 8th, 1874, at the Round Hill Hotel, Northampton, Mass. Seventeen of the class were present, viz.: Adams, Ballantine, Brown, Chickering, Childs, Cook, Donald, C. F. Eastman, J. H. Eastman, Gage, Hobbie, Kellogg, Larned, Lewis, H. B. Richardson, Skidmore and Stoddard. At this meeting the class-cup was presented to Warren Day Brown.

III.—Wednesday evening July 2d, 1879, at the Amherst House, Amherst, Mass. Twenty-three of the class were present, viz.: E. A. Adams, H. Adams, Allen, Bogart, Brown, Chickering, Donald, J. H. Eastman, Emmons, Goodman, Hammond, Hewett, Kellogg, Larned, Lewis, Page, H. B. Richardson, J. K. Richardson, Seabury, Skidmore, Slocum, Tracy, and Woods.

IV.—Wednesday evening, July 2d, 1884, at the Amherst House, Amherst Mass. Twenty-two of the class were present, viz.: H. Adams, Allen, Bacon, Ballantine, Brown, Chickering, Childs, Donald, J. H. Eastman, Hammond, Humphrey, Keese, Kellogg, Lewis, H. B. Richardson, J. K. Richardson, Skidmore, Slocum, H. P. Smith, Stoddard, Tenney and Woods.

V.—Wednesday evening, July 3d, 1889, at Amherst, Mass. Seventeen of the class were present, viz. : H. Adams, Bogart, Chickering, Clark, Cook, Donald, J. H. Eastman, Hewett, Howes, Kellogg, Larned, Lewis, H. B. Richardson, J. K. Richardson, Seabury, Skidmore, and Woods. F. D. Lewis was re-elected President, W. R. Brown, Secretary and Treasurer, and H. B. Richardson, R. M. Woods and J. K. Chickering, Executive Committee.

J. H. Eastman reported the preparation of a second edition of the class history, covering the entire period of twenty years since graduation. He was directed to send copies to all the graduate and non-graduate members of the class, and the price was fixed at two dollars and a half.

It was announced that the class-scholarship had now reached the amount decided upon, $1,500, and its income would be available the coming year. Chickering proved a most skillful regulator of the "flow of soul." Dr. Howes with his "desultory remarks" and original song capped the climax. The re-union was most delightful in every way. The absent ones were all remembered, and letters from several brought their greetings and regrets. It was resolved to make special effort to have a larger number present at the next re-union.
